RED HOT POETRY.

Backward, roll backward, O time on your beat;
Give us a chilly snap, shut off the heat;
North wind, come back from the Boreal shore;
Let loose your stiff, bracing breezes once more;
List to us, pity us, don't you undo us,
Keep back that hot wave postmarked "St. Louis."
Now, while the grangers' nice sickle's in sight,
Give us an icicle sparkling and bright;
O'er our thermometers your cold vigils keep,
Temper the heat. Temps, temper the heat?
—Albany Journal.

A WISH OR TWO.

Oh for a hurricane or two
To cool th's torrid misery down,
Snow, sleet, or chunks of hail like those
The icemen peddle through the town,
O send some sweeping cold wave
From frozen Greenland's farthest shore,
And land an iceberg in our yard
Ten thousand cubits high or more.

THE HEAT.

At last two Fahrenheits blew up,
And killed two children small,
And one barometer shot dead
A tutor with its ball.

The dogs ran mad—men could not try
If water they would choose;
A horse fell dead—he only left
Four red hot, rusty shoes!
Oliver Wendell Holmes

THE NAUTILUS SAFE.

ARRIVED SAFELY IN ENGLAND BUT AFTER A TERRIBLE ORDEAL.

London, Aug. 2. The American boat Nautilus arrived yesterday in Mount's Bay, an inlet of the Atlantic, on the coast of Cornwall, situated between the Horns of Cornwell, two promontories which terminate respectively in the Land's End and Lizard Point. The crew, consisting of two brothers, William and Walter Andrews, of Boston, who left Beverly, Mass., June 12, landed in the village of Mullion, Cornwall, appearing greatly fatigued. They give a very interesting account of their perilous and adventurous voyage. For a few days after leaving the American coast they experienced pleasant weather; but this pleasant state of things quickly changed, fogs, wind, and rain prevailing for a considerable period. This was very trying, and they were subjected to a great deal of hardship. Their bed-clothes got quite wet, and for four weeks they had to sleep in their wet clothes. On many days they could take no sleep whatever, and were worked so hard by reason of the bad weather that they could scarcely eat or drink anything. On the Fourth of July they had the luxury of a bottle of lagar beer, which they had kept specially for that day. For eighteen days they never saw the sun, and could take no observations. They had passed many shoals of whales, and experienced some danger from them. They were often so close to the whales as to be able to touch them, but hesitated to do it through fear of getting their little boat upset. They spoke several steamers and sailing vessels, and obtained some observations. On July 1 the seas ran mountain high putting their little craft in imminent danger, and imposing on them the most sleepless vigilance. This continued for a number of days, till the strain on their bodies and minds became very great, but they bore up cheerfully, and overcame every danger. They underwent, during a portion of the time, some really terrible weather, and at one period were literally between life and death. Their chronometer got broken and was rendered entirely useless, and they encountered tremendous difficulties and dangers. July 26 was decidedly the worst day of the voyage, the weather being simply terrible. During the whole of the voyage such sleep as they were able to get was very disturbed, and was more like a sort of continuous stupor. This was, perhaps, the most trying ordeal they had to go through, as they felt the fatigues of the voyage much more keenly through the want of rest. Neither of them had ever crossed the Atlantic before. Sometimes they had to lie to for many hours, with the drag out, and throwing oil overboard. On July 13th they took the first observation they had been able to make for eighteen days. When they made Scilly Light they were very much exhausted, and have to in Mullion roads on Wednesday night. William seems to feel the strain most. Walter looks better, but had a bad hand caused by so much steering. The whole passage occupied forty-five days. The two brothers will leave for Havre as soon as the the weather permits, after having a little necessary rest. They will visit the Paris Exhibition before returning to America.

Railroad Magnates.

The object of the gathering of the railroad magnates at a hotel in Saratoga where last evening, in the figurative phrase of a Times despatch, "several hundreds millions were walking up and down the piazza, listening to the delightful music," has, no doubt, been unfolded correctly as an attempt, first, to bring the Michigan feeders of Mr. Vanderbilt's road into a combination with a systematic and profitable tariff—a comparatively easy task—and, secondly, to induce a combination of all the trunk lines. Mr. Vanderbilt's endeavor to cut the Western connections of the Grand Trunk Railroad was announced as successful a few days ago, and it may be that the great railroad manager believes that with the Canada road, which has always been a thorn in the side of combinations, out of the contest, a tight coalition is now feasible, while before combinations have been loose and transitory. Be this as it may, the announcement that the Grand Trunk people have secured money in England to finish a new railroad link in place of the one absorbed by Mr. Vanderbilt is of direct pertinence to the subject-matter before the Vanderbilt conference, as well as of vital interest to the public, to whom the aggressive policy of the Canada road has been a decided benefit—that is to say, a benefit, if cheap rates for the public are a greater benefit than fair dividends to stockholders, which we believe Mr. Vanderbilt denies. The railroad situation in this country is altogether just now one of rare interest. The westward freight combination is strong and profitable; the eastward compact is practically broken, and the roads are all at odds and ends, taking freight for almost anything; and Mr. Vanderbilt all the while is moving over the field like a commander in battle seeking to reunite his scattered battalions, to conciliate fickle allies and to cut the lines of the enemy. But the task is one that will call for his best powers.—N.Y. Post.

THE ROUSE'S POINT MURDER.

(Witness.)

There is still a probability of some difficulty in adjusting the estate of the late Mr. Matheson, although Mr. C. O. Perrault, Vice-Consul of France, has been put in full possession of the estate in the interests of its heirs, and will doubtless see that it is justly and properly divided among the rightful claimants. When, however, he went to Madame Coste, in whose house the merchandise belonging to the deceased is stored, that lady declared that the goods all belonged to her, and that Mr. Matheson only acted as her clerk, and stated that she had a deed of sale passed before a notary conveying the property from deceased to her. It was found, however, on looking up this deed of sale, that it was dated in July, 1875, which makes it not very probable, though quite possible, that the goods now at Madame Coste's house are the same as those conveyed to her by this deed of sale.

Mr. Justice Rainville yesterday ordered the seizure of all the goods and chattels belonging to Matheson with whomsoever they should be found, and Mr. George Hughes, notary, was appointed in temporary charge of the same. Seals have been placed upon four cases of goods at Madame Coste's, and it is learned that altogether there are about forty boxes, containing ribbons, velvets, ladies' scarfs, lace and silks, which it is thought belonged to Mr. Matheson, but which Madame Coste claims as hers. It is curious to note that at the inquest yesterday, Madame Coste declared that all the property in the trunk and valise, as well as the watch and chain, found in Costofrolax's possession, were the property of Mathevon, whereas a few days since she distinctly declared to our reporter, and also to Mr. Perrault, that they were all her property. There are also some $2,500 to $3,000 funds in the Banque du Peuple, and more at the Seminary, belonging to the deceased's estate. It is probable Mr. Beaufort, an old and respected French resident here, will be appointed curator.

A Nut for Burglars to Crack.

The Metropolitan Elevated Railroad Company has in course of construction at No. 71 Broadway, a fire and burglar proof vault for the safe keeping of the books and money of the company. Beginning at the foundations of the subcellar a solid pier of masonry twelve feet eight inches square was erected to a height of twenty-two feet, or to a point one foot below the floor of the first storey of the building. On the top of this pier was laid a platform of railroad iron, dovetailed together and securely bound with iron clamps. A bed of cement was laid on this, and upon the cement heavy bluestone flagging, which forms the floor of the vault on this storey.

From the top of the pier the vault groper extends to the third floor, with separate, vaults on the first and second floors. The ceiling of the first storey vault is of bluestone upon which is laid another layer of railroad iron and upon this again concrete and bluestone flagging. The sides of the vault are formed of railroad iron dovetailed together, with many bands of iron extending around the vault and rivetted to every alternate rail. On the interior and also on the exterior of this iron crossing are twelve inch brick walls. The ceiling of the upper vault is similar to the one below, except that upon the casing of railroad iron a much heavier bed of concrete and masonry is laid. The doors are double doors with a space of two feet between the inner and outer doors, and all are fitted with the most improved burglar locks.

The entire structure is fifty feet in height, and is supposed to be proof against any probable assault of either man or the elements.—N.Y. Post.

Interesting News.

Port Colborne, Ont., July 29.—There is very little to report in marine circles, excepting the break in freights at Toledo. Heretofore no grain has been carried from that port to Kingston or Oswego at less than four cents, but now the break has come, and it seems doubtful where it will stop. It commenced on one-eighth, dropped to a quarter, and now it is three and one-half, with the prospect of a final drop this week, as shippers are presenting no indications of being in a hurry with their grain, although the Board of Trade circular shows a large advance in the amount of grain in stock. Lake Erie to Lake Ontario freights exhibit a firmer tendency, but without any advance. Coal from Ashtabula or Cleveland to Toronto or Hamilton is freely carried for 80 cents; Black River to Toronto, 85c., and Toledo to Toronto, 90c. Shipments from the latter port are small, as the additional five cents offer very little inducements for vessels to go there and load.

In addition to our provincial marine law, our tug men have a law of their own which works admirably since their combination. It is called "the Laughlin law," and it consists in all tugs staying away from a vessel which is in arrears for tug bills. The vessel captain then generally settles in full, and he gets credit for one tow, but must come down when he returns. Combination makes all things practicable, in the vessel business at least.

The tug men on the lower level are having a warm time, the "Minerva" opposition line being the motive power which is causing all the trouble.
