CLAMOR FOR PROTECTION.

ITS FOLLY AND INCONSISTENCY SHOWN UP.

The Chicago Tribune, after noticing the action of the Ontario Manufacturers' and Industrial Association at the recent session at Toronto, says:

It will be remembered that at the late election in Canada there was a pretty general support of the policy of increasing the Canadian tariff. Under the high American tariff and the low Canadian tariff there was but little reciprocity in the business for Americans could sell in the Canadian market, while the Canadians could sell in this country (so far as manufactures are concerned) from selling in this country. There was a general feeling that the adoption the Canadian tariff would eventually lead to a new and reciprocal commercial union between the two countries.

But now comes the Canadian Protectionists. They want no trade with the United States. They want an exclusive Canadian market for Canadian productions. They want to shut the United States out and to shut out all the rest of the world. Canada for the Canadians is their motto; they want such a high tariff on American coal, iron, and all other American products, that nothing shall be produced, or fashioned on Yankee soil shall ever be introduced into Canada.

Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the coast provinces of British America get their flour and their provisions generally from Boston, New York, Portland, and flour from Chicago and west to the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and sold there cheaper than Canadian flour can be obtained from Ontario and this, it is claimed, must be sought. The Nova Scotians have to continue to purchase their flour of the Upper Province and pay a dollar or more per barrel. The Nova Scotians may not be prepared to admit the justice of this measure, but they must be taught that it is patriotic to pay an extra price of bread to one man than to another, especially if you have to pay up with one loss when you might have saved the money.

The people of Ontario and Quebec have of late years been large purchasers of British goods, especially of anthracite. This the Convention proposes shall be prohibited, and the St. Lawrence Provinces shall hereafter purchase all their coal from Picton, and pay accordingly a dear price for it. In fact, the Canadians are about to adopt the Chinese and our own American policy of exclusion,—cutting off all trade with the outer world, and raising from 20 to 40 per cent. to the consumers. We do not exactly understand whether they propose to tax the wheat, corn, oats, flour, and other breadstuffs which are now taken from the United States to Montreal and thence shipped to Europe. To be consistent, they should exclude the United States from Montreal and other Canadian ports as a market. Of what avail will it be to the Ontario farmers to protect themselves against local competition if the Yankees shall be at liberty to ship a million of bushels of grain every week through American canals and thence to Great Britain? Perish the thought, even if the contingency never drains business!

The great people of Canada are about to try if they can solve the question whether 'Protection can protect.' They are about to tax themselves on all they eat, drink, wear and otherwise consume, from 20 to 40 per cent. more than they are now taxed. They do this in the expectation that it will exclude all foreign productions and give to Canadian producers an exclusive market. Will it? We have tried the experiment in this country and know the fallacy of all such expectations. Under our protective tariff we import one—we annually increased our importations of foreign goods of all kinds. Protected on the one hand and taxed on the other taxed to excess on all things making up the cost of production, our manufacturers found themselves producing for a limited market, and underbidden by foreign rivals. At last, finding our credit, we ceased to buy, and could not pay for. Our manufactories, forced by the breakdown of home market prices, and the great reduction of the cost of production, have entered on a new era of prosperity. They are making goods to sell. They are selling cotton cloths in England for less money than is exacted by the tariff on the same kind of imported goods. That is to say, the duty on imported cottons is greater than the price at which American manufacturers are offering the same same goods in Europe.

We do not propose, however, to argue the question of Canadian tariff. Protection is one of those delusions which, like the money, cannot be argued out of any mind in which it has obtained possession. It can only be cured by experience, long, costly, and ruinous experience. The sooner the policy of Protection is adopted, and the more rigid and comprehensive it may be in its details, the sooner it will reach its explosion. Let the tariff be built up. Leave nothing out of the list. Tax raw cotton, cocoanuts, and bananas,—these are not Canadian productions, but, if sufficiently protected, cotton may be grown in hot-houses in Ontario. It is possible that Canada and the United States may, because of this new Canadian tariff, reach in time a rational system of commercial reciprocity. When two combatants have reached an equal degree of exhaustion, they may be in a better mind to come to an agreement and satisfactory adjustment of their troubles. At all events, let us hope that, when Canada has sufficiently crippled her industries, impoverished her labour, and wasted a liberal share of capital in the endeavor to run a home market on the non-intercourse principle, she will find the United States also sufficiently cured of that delusion to agree with her in a commercial union in which the people of the two countries may find peace, profitable intercourse, and that general prosperity which must always attend the widest commercial exchanges.

DARING HOUSE-BREAKERS.

BURGLARS ENTER A MINISTER'S RESIDENCE AND ARE SURPRISED BY AN HISTORICAL WEAPON.

A few days since a well-dressed individual stumbled up the steps of the Dominion Square Methodist Church Parsonage, the residence of the Rev. H. F. Bland, and, after turning the handle of the door several times, rang the bell, and asked to see the minister. He appeared to be drunk, and said he wanted good advice, on which Mr. Bland advised him to sign the pledge; this he promised to do, and with tears (probably onion tears) asked for some tracts to distribute. All the time he kept looking around him stealthily, to which Mr. Bland at the time attached no particular importance, and promised to visit him if he would leave his address; but before he had departed Mr. Bland was in possession of three different addresses.

THE VISIT OF THE HYPOCRITE

was forgotten until last night, when new events brought it vividly to mind. The family had been asleep for some hours, when a slight noise awakened James (Mr. Bland's eldest son at home), who was sleeping on the second flat. Starting up he saw "a new face at the door" of the bedroom, and when the unwelcome visitor had hastily drawn back, James got up and went to the door, where he listened for some moments, but hearing no noise, returned again. All was quiet again for a while, when Mrs. Bland was awakened by footsteps on the stairs. She asked "who's there?" when the person coming up tripped on the carpet, and assured her it was a stranger, and no member of the family. She rose, but in the meantime the first burglar, who had reached the head of the stairs, had gone into James' room to make sure that he would not interrupt them again. He stood for a moment over the bed, when James awoke again to behold the rascal not a yard from him. Quickly remembering that an old cavalry sword, which had been used by Quarter-Master Thompson at the taking of Quebec, was at the head of the bed, James seized it, scabbard and all, and inspired by something of the valor of he shouted 'You villains!' and dashed after the intruders, who fell headlong, pell mell down the stairs, scrambling out of the front door and disappeared, leaving the white-robed pursurer master of the situation. It was soon discovered that the burglars had entered by the basement, coming up stairs had opened the front door and placed the key on the outside so that they might lock it if pursued. They stole a complete suit of clothes, belonging to Master Geo. Bland from one of bedrooms, and from the parlor stole two Dufferin medals which George had won at school. A fur cap and overcoat were also taken from the hall.

The First Offence.

A pretty, dark-eyed girl, about 20 years of age, was arraigned in the Fifty-seventh Street Court yesterday, having been found the evening before helplessly drunk in the street.

'It's a pity to send so young and pretty a woman to the Island,' said the magistrate. 'Is there no one in court who knows her?

No response was given for a few moments when a handsome, well-knit young fellow came quickly forward to the Judge's bench, and said, in a voice hoarse with emotion:

'She is my wife, sir. It is not her first offense, and, God forgive me, I had determined to let her suffer this time. I find my love for her will not allow of my quietly seeing her punished, however much she may deserve it. Forgive her, your Honor, as I now do. She has been, and I will perhaps again be, as good a wife as ever man was blessed with.'

The tears were tickling down his face, and while yet his cheek was wet his erring wife was free.—New York Herald.

MURDER IN ENGLAND.—The English papers show that there were no less than six murder trials in two days—the 5th and 6th instants—in England. One of these cases was that of wife murder; one was that of a paramour of the female prisoner, who was tried with her husband, and two of them were murderers of children of the accused parties.

BE WISE.—Too often a cold or sligh cought is considered a very ordinary, trifling affair, just as well let go as it came, and hence systematically neglected until a simple curable affection is converted into a serious pulmonary disease. The more prudent, aware that a cough or cold should never be trifled with, promptly use Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, which have sustained their reputation for over 20 years. They are always efficacious, and exert a most beneficial influence on all the bronchial and pulmonary organs. Sold by all druggists and country dealers at 25 cents per box.

VERY NATURAL.—When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended, he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation, or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and valuable horse medicine known as "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." All are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other, many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing to it as a conditioner. Remember the name and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.
