

John Dubost succumbs to cancer

John Dubost, 74, whose story was featured in the Oakville Beaver Focus section on April 12th, has died of cancer on April 22nd. Being cared for at his home by his wife Jeanne, it was his wish to die in the Palliative Care Unit of Oakville Trafalgar

Memorial Hospital, where he was a volunteer before being diagnosed with cancer. He was taken to OTMH on April 17th. "He died quickly. He slipped into a coma, and suffered no pain," said his wife. He was cremated. No funeral service will be held.

Community volunteer dies

Funeral services were held Monday for an Oakville woman, whose love for her family and community were equally strong.

Marjorie Gertrude Carberry would have marked her 81st birthday today.

Born on the family farm in Laurel, Ontario, she was the eldest child of William and Gertrude Carroll. She was raised in Mitchell, attended high school there and went on to attend MacDonald Institute (University of Guelph) and then to the University of Toronto, earning her BHSc degree.

Marjorie worked for the Ontario Department of Agriculture from 1942 to 1944, taught home economics in Toronto and worked as a dietitian for the Hospital for Sick Children (HSC) and at children's camps during the summer months. It was while at HSC, that she was on the team that created the formula for Pabulum.

Marjorie Carberry

One year after her marriage to Ewart Carberry in 1945, she moved to Oakville and together they had five children, Lynne, Michael, Stephen, Brian and Anne.

Active in many organizations, she was a charter member of the University Women's Club, a member of the IODE, a charter member of the Opti-Mrs., a member of the Elizabeth Fry Society and Group Committee member for Boy Scouts Canada.

She was also a member of the Oakville Historical Society and active for many years at St. Jude's Anglican Church where she served as President of the Women's Auxiliary.

She was one of the founding members of the Oakville Rug Hooking Guild, a hobby that became her passion. Marjorie was active as a teacher of that art and was in demand in Ontario, Nova Scotia, at the Banff School of Fine Arts and in the United States.

An avid reader throughout her life, Marjorie was also a talented amateur painter and potter, an active curler and golfer and member of two bridge clubs.

In addition to her husband and children, Marjorie leaves seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, sister Willa and brother Donald. She was pre-deceased by son Stephen and brothers Kenneth and Glenn.

Salon owner dies

Vaso Uzelac, owner of the Silhouette Beauty Salon in downtown Oakville, has died.

He was found dead at his Oakville home on April 19th. He was in his 78.

He has owned the successful hair salon in Oakville for over 40 years.

"He was so generous and gentle with his senior customers," said Joyce Burnell, a long-time client and friend. He went far beyond giving seniors reduced rates for their hair cuts and styling.

"He would walk them to the door, and helped them with their walkers and canes," she said. "He was just loved in town."

Prior to coming to Oakville, he worked as a hairstylist in England, where he learned English.

A newspaper article written at the time reported Uzelac, had recently arrived in England from Vienna to "introduce his own special brand of hair styling," which included a reverse curl technique.

At the time, his English was limited to 'thank you,' 'trim,' 'set,' 'shampoo,' and 'good morning madam.' He would look at his clients and do their hair, with pleasing results, according to a woman quoted in that same newspaper article.

Uzelac hails from

He is survived by a sister, Kata Davidovic, and four nephews, all of Yugoslavia.

Passion for expansion

But, to avoid the maintenance a traditional New England clapboard building would require, the congregation opted for vinyl siding. And, to reduce maintenance on the windows, aluminum moldings cover some of the wood.

The new building reflects the congregation's passion.

The first Christian Science services were held in Oakville in 1919 at a private home. Later that year, as the congregation grew, a hall was rented, an association established, and Sunday School classes were held along with regular services.

In 1922, the fledgling congregation applied to the Mother Church in Boston, Mass., to establish the Christian Science Society. It's first public lecture was held in 1926.

The congregation rented the former Temperance Hall at Dundas Street and Trafalgar Road in 1931, and a Christian Science Reading Room was established.

Land for its first church building was acquired at 23 Reynolds St., and the first service in the new building was held on Sept. 26, 1951. The building was dedicated, debt free, on April 27, 1952. In 1957, with the approval of the Mother Church, the congregation became known as First Church of Christ, Scientist.

By the early 1960s, the congregation had outgrown its first church building. In June 1962, a stately home with spacious grounds at 1111 Lakeshore Rd. E., was purchased, and after some renovations, the first service at this location was held on July 17, 1963. The expanded space allowed for the opening of a nursery. This building was sold in April 1993, and has reverted back to being a private residence.

The church moved into a temporary storefront at the corner of Navy and Randall Streets, where it remained until its new Bronte building was completed.

The Church of Christ, Scientist, was founded by Mary Baker Eddy (1821-1910) of New Hampshire, who in 1866 identified the teachings of Christ's healing as Christian Science. She wrote Science and Health with Keys to the Scriptures in 1875. The denomination is best known for its publication of the Christian Science Monitor, which she founded in 1908.
