The Gift of Knowledge

Possibly no other skill separates the generations than computer skills. To succeed at nearly any job in today's market, it takes at least a basic knowledge of the computer's capabilities. If you don't have any computer skills, and you would like to keep the job you have or get a better one, now is the time to be dragged, kicking and screaming into the twenty-first century.

Lucky for you, it's not really that hard, or that terrifying once you get started. And getting started is easy. Whether you are the type of person who learns better alone, or at the hands of a mentor, there are lots of basic and advanced computer classes available at the Academy of Learning in Oakville. They are perhaps the best and the least expensive way for you to make the right choice for your future.

This holiday season give yourself and those you care for the gift of knowledge.

You can reach the Academy of Learning at (905) 338-6600 or by dropping by at 466 Speers Road, Ste. 208, in Oakville
