TORNADO IN OHIO. DAMAGE IN CINCINNATI $500,000!

CINCINNATI, May 22.—The most destructive tornado ever known visited this city yesterday afternoon between three and four o'clock. The storm came from the north-west, and appeared to be a cloud densely black some two miles in breadth—rushing forward with fearful rapidity, accompanied with thunder and lightning and torrents of rain. The damage done in this city by the blowing down and unroofing of houses is immense, and will probably approximate $500,000. A large number of persons were injured, but as far as is ascertained but six persons were killed. The roof of the new commercial office building was blown off, portions of which were carried to the distance of an entire square. A part of the wall fell through Johnson's saloon adjoining the street, and the people who were on the ground floor. The steeple of the St. Joseph Catholic Church was blown off and fell through the roof. Most all the public buildings, school-houses and churches, besides a large number of dwellings were unroofed or otherwise damaged. The telegraph lines in every direction were prostrated, and but little is known of the damage in the country, but as far as ascertained it has been fully as severe as in the city. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad was covered with a forest of fallen timber between here and Carthage village, and the engine along the Little Miami Road between here and Loveland suffered terribly. The railroad depot at Loveland and other buildings were demolished, as were also the railroad shops at Lawrenceburg. The Catholic Seminary on the hill beyond Dayton was unroofed, and the road between Cincinnati and the Breckinridge House was covered with trees torn up by the roots. Many houses and gardens along the roads were severely damaged. The storm raged with fearful violence along the river. The steamers at the levee, however, were properly moored and weathered the gale. The steamer Virginia Home, when two miles above the city, was captured, and the cabin parting from the hull, floated down the river in fragments. There were but three passengers on board, all of whom were saved. Two of the crew were lost. The boat was valued at $6,000. At Spring Grove Cemetery the destruction of monuments, trees, and shrubbery was severe. Along the Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville Railroad, from Morrowtown to Circleville, trees were blown down by thousands and several houses were destroyed. At Mount Auburn there was a great destruction of trees and shrubbery, and all along Clinton Avenue trees were uprooted. A train on the Covington and Lexington Railroad was thrown off the track, and the locomotive and baggage car were completely demolished. The passengers escaped unhurt. A heavy rain set in early in the evening and continued till after midnight, drenching the habitations already made roofless by the storm, which is conceded to have been the most disastrous known to the present generation. It is impossible to enumerate all the damage done, but scarcely a house in the city escaped uninjured. No traces of the storm were seen on the Ohio and Mississippi road west of Lawrenceburg. From that point east its signs are seen on every hand. North-west of the city it appears to have extended about seven miles. On the Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad the tornado was very severe as far east as Chillicothe. Trees were blown down in all directions, houses unroofed, and a general destruction of property is apparent in all quarters. Great fears are entertained for steamboats and coal boats on the river above.

enjoying themselves at one of the excursion parties, to learn the melancholy tidings that their son, a promising young man had met with an untimely death. The sorrowful intelligence cast quite a gloom over the city. A further search will be made for the bodies of the unfortunate persons to-day.

At his residence, near Elgin Mills, Vaughan, on the 25th ult., Thomas Duguid Campbell, aged 43 years, eldest son of the late Alexander Campbell, Esq., lieutenant of Her Majesty's 104th regiment.

On the 15th ult., the beloved wife of Mr. Henry MacNeill, Aurora, aged 28 years, after a lingering illness. She leaves three children and a large circle of acquaintances by whom she was much respected in mourning her loss.
