

Porting.

CHARITY.

Oh! little happiness there is
In this bleak world of ours,
So many thorns are in life's path
They choke up all the flowers.
But happier far the world would be
If Charity were here,
To shield us from the eye of scorn,
And ensure too severe.

Then let us seek that Charity
Which is so soft and kind,
Which gently leads the erring one,
From the dark path of crime.
From whose bright eye, the pitying tear
For sorrow's sons doth flow;
Who has a solace for each grief,
A balm for every woe.

Oh! let us follow in her steps—
And taste that rare delight
Which only those may know, whose power
Has won a soul to fight.
There is some good in every heart—
A gentle word may wake
The better feelings of the heart—
Do not the bad forsake!

Perhaps no mother's love he knew,
No father's earnest prayer;
A homeless, friendless orphan boy;
Let him thy pity share.
Oh! think what would have been thy fate,
If he, thy lot had been;
He'd do no one to teach him right
Or guard his steps from sin.

Then, "judge not!" but with Charity
Lock on thy brother's sin,
Thou mayest know the heart's fur depths—
The hidden springs within.
Thou canst not know what burning wrongs
May thus have changed his soul—
Thou, too, art liable to err,
And may not reach thy goal.

And if thy spirit stronger be,
Oh! is it then the power?
Did not the same Creator give
To thee, that glorious dower;
Who, in His wisdom placed his path
Mid sin and sorrow here?
Then boast not thou thyself more pure,
And be not too severe.

Miscellaneous.

Sigs of the times—Ensigns.

Life is a beautiful night, in which, as some stars go down, others rise.

The most genial "bladder" are those of Damascus, for they keep their temper splendidly.

General Scott, like Marlborough, has never lost a battle. The fear of the rebels is that he never will.

Interference with persons of decided virtue and excellence is of great importance to the foundation of a good character.

Notwithstanding the depreciated value of negroes at the South, their owners are not so anxious to have them rise on their hands.

EXAMINER.—"Who was the strongest man?" "Swartz." "Why?" "Who?"
"Cause the whole couldn't hold him after he got him down."

"No day without an act of love,"
was the maxim of the benevolent Larater.
How many real woes would this relieve how many fancied ones put to flight.

Apathy is one of the worst diseases, as it not only incapacitates us from combating the encroachments of vice, but closes every avenue of their souls to the approach of virtue.

Time.—Dr. Franklin, being an editor, knew the value of time. He says:
"Every little fragment of the day should be saved. Our expense has abundantly proved the truth of the aphorism."

TOM SAYERS.—"Weel, Tibbie," said
a guide to an old neighbor, soon after Hawes and Cushing's show had entered Calashers, "hoo ye seen that great Tom Sayers that they have bruvit frae England? the show?" "Oo, deed hae I," replied Tibbie, "I saw 'em the High Street, gaun loose just like an ordinary man?"

"That's a stupid brute of yours, John,"
said a Scotch minister to a parishioner, who drove his merchandise from door to door in a small cart drawn by a donkey;
"I never see you but you are braying."
"Ah, sir," said the dealer, "ye ken the heart's warm when fens meet."

READY PAT.—An Irishman addicted to telling queer stories, said he saw a man beheaded with his hands tied behind him,
who directly picked up his head and put it
on his shoulders in the right place. "Ha, ha, ha," said a bystander, "how could he pick up his head when his hands were tied behind him?" "And sure what a purty fool you are!" said Pat; "And couldn't he pick it up with his teeth?" To which Nick replied: "You're a fool."

A pragmatical young fellow, sitting at table opposite Lord Eldon (John Scott), asked him, "What difference is there between Scott and me?" "Judge the breadth of this table," was the reply.

Idleness is the mother of mischief. The moment a horse has done eating his oats,
he turns to and gnaws down his manger.
Substitute labor for oats, and virtue for and what is true of horses is equally true
of man.
