Laurier offers study skills program

The study skills program available at Wilfrid Laurier University can help pave the way to academic success this year.

"This program is designed to help incoming students study more effectively, learn more efficiently and perform more successfully in university work," said Dale Fogle, WLU's director of counselling services.

Covered in the program are such areas as time management, reading and memory skills, essay writing, class presentations and exam preparation.

Instructional workshops in specific learning methods are offered regularly by study skills instructor Maryann Kope. An overview workshop, open to all part- and full-time Laurier students, will be held Sept. 12 at 7 p.m. in the university's Paul Martin Centre.

There is no charge for these student services. For more information or pre-registration, call the study skills program office at 884-1970 ext. 2338.
