

Whimsical Review

She: "I wonder if it is true that the length of a boy's arm is equal to the circumference of a girl's waist?"

He: "Let's get a string and measure it."

The latest reported bit from Tin-Pan Alley is: "If You'll Be My Red-Hot Mamma, I'll Be Your Ice Cold Pop."

Prof.: "If a man should eat a stick of phosphorus what would become of him?"

Class: "Don't know."

Prof.: "That depends on how he has lived."

"What will you give me for my car?"

"A five-dollar bill."

"Sorry, old top, but I haven't got any change."

Losing Strength

"An' how's yer wife, Pat?"

"Sure, she do be awful sick."

"Is ut dangerous she is?"

"No, she's too weak to be dangerous anny more."

Reformeress: "What's your opinion of the Child Labor Amendment?"

Politician: "Well, lady, by the time it's passed they'll all be grown up, so there ain't no use passing it."

A small boy was sitting rather close to a fussy woman in a crowded car, and he kept sniffing in a most annoying way.

Finally she asked: "Boy, have you a handkerchief?"

The small boy looked at her for a few seconds, and then, in a dignified manner, replied: "Yes, I have; but I don't lend it to strangers."

"But why six wireless sets in your room?"

"Because I hate the darn things and I can keep all six shut off if I feel like it."

"I just swallowed a wishbone and now I won't be able to make a wish."

"Nonsense. Just wish you hadn't swallowed it."

He: "Do you think you could grow to love me?"

She: "I'm afraid not; you see, I've done growing."

Miss Flat: "I'm sorry you don't think much of my voice, professor. The people next door say I ought to go abroad to study."

Professor: "Yes, but I don't live next door."

At a prayer meeting in a colored church the pastor was expounding the passage which tells of the passing of the children of Israel through the Red Sea.

"It is all very simple," he said. "You know that water generally flows down hill, but in this yere instance things was jis' reversed. The water, instead of flowin' down hill, done suddenly flowed up hill, leavin' the bottom of the sea all dry—yes, bredderin', dry, so that all the children ob Israel jus' passed lobar without eben wettin' their feet. Then—"

"But," interrupted a young colored brother who had been to high school, "it wouldn't have done that, pastor. It would have been against the law of gravitation."

"You jest set down, sah," answered the pastor, with a patronizing wave of the hand. "You don't know what you are talkin' about. This all happened 3000 years 'fore the law of gravitation done been discovered." That settled the matter, also the young man.

Trip up Hollyburn Ridge By Phone Operator

Miss J. Turner, Douglas operator, was kind enough to prepare, with the assistance of her brother, an article describing a hike up Hollyburn Ridge, West Vancouver. Owing to the lack of space, we are compelled to let the hiking party puff and struggle for the first part of the journey alone, but now, after dark on a winter's Saturday night, we meet them as they pause upon the trail high up on the hillside. Miss Turner tells the story:

"We are higher than the timber which previously obstructed our view, and away on the plain to the south the glistening lights of Vancouver can be seen. Rank after rank of serried stars, which mark the avenues, sparkle in the frosty air, while the street lights interspersed here, there and everywhere add to the charm of the scene.

"We cannot remain here long, for we still have quite a distance to go, so packs are shifted and once more we prepare to attack the heights before us."

(They reach the old mill, lying in ruins, and enter the timber above it.)

"From the old mill to the ski camp, our goal, is probably the easiest stretch of the trail. It takes possibly half an hour to cover the distance, but most hikers are sure that it is the longest half-hour's walk in their experience. However, it is a long trail that has no end, and at length, after plodding wearily through the forest, with the eerie silence punctuated every once in a while by the hooting of some night bird, we see the sought-for lights, and both hearts and packs almost miraculously become much lighter.

"We have arrived!" "Pushing open the door, we enter a large room which serves both as living and dining room. Greeting Oscar, the somewhat retiring though obliging Swede who runs the camp, we reserve our bunks and order coffee—veritable nectar! After stretching one's legs by the great open fireplace recently installed in the cabin, one feels mightily refreshed and soon is able to join in anything that might be going on.

"Have no fear of a dull evening up Hollyburn. There is always something to do, and most of the campers have to be persuaded to go to bed by Oscar, who starts putting out the lights after 12:30.

"With the dawn one has the choice of rising early to go skiing, when the snow is crisp with the night's frost, or of grabbing some enthusiast's blankets, making a more comfortable bed for oneself, and sleeping until the growing babel of voices forces one to rise for a belated breakfast.

"Breakfast over, we speculate as to the activities of the day. Shall we go skiing or venture to the peak? The trip to the peak is worth while, and an hour's trudge through the snow is amply rewarded by the glorious view one gets from the summit. Vancouver and the lower mainland make one vast panorama to the south, while to the north-west can be seen Howe Sound and Bowen Island, and away to the west is a trace of Vancouver Island. The toylike ships in Burrard Inlet and the thickly-wooded promontory of Stanley Park seem like part of another world, while Vancouver itself, when viewed from this lofty height, is infinitely more beautiful than the city of our everyday life."

Engineer Reports on Garbage Dump

In connection with the complaints recently received regarding the present garbage dump, the municipal engineer reported to the council at their special meeting on Monday night on the conditions obtaining there, which he found to be not altogether satisfactory. His report contained the following suggestions:

(1) To collect the old tins which high tides have scattered over private property.

(2) To raise the grade of the road and put a screen on the culvert to prevent the tins being carried by the waters onto private property.

(3) To burn up the pile of scrap lumber where rats at present obtain shelter.

In his opinion the present dumping place was quite suitable for dumping ashes, and, providing that the council thought the time opportune, a bylaw could be introduced making proper garbage cans compulsory and the keeping of ashes and other classes of garbage separate, so that they could be hauled to different disposal places. The matter was laid over.

Newly Paved Roads Need Coating

The municipal engineer reported at the special meeting of the council on Monday night that in the large mileage of road paved during the past three seasons the pavements were narrow, resulting in vehicles when passing one another having to use the earth shoulders. He recommended that the edges of the pavement and the shoulders of these roads should be given careful and regular maintenance. Where muddy a light coating of crushed rock should be put down to prevent wear. The matter was laid over.
