GARDENS and GARDENING

By MINA G. HUTT,
Landscape Architect

Seed of the early biennials and perennials sown as soon as matured on the plants will give much better results than that which is carried over until spring. Considerable moisture is evaporated from the seed if it is held over, which must be re-absorbed before the seed will begin to germinate.

Select the most perfect blooms of the flowers you wish to increase, and mark by tying string around the stems. Allow to thoroughly mature and fade, then remove the seed vessel. Spread the seed on a paper in the sun for a few days before starting in the seed bed.

Ellen Eddy Shaw, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, writing in the July issue of American Home, advises that the seed bed be prepared as follows: "Spade deeply, digging down at least two feet. It is a good idea to take the soil out of this bed, and put in the bottom a layer of drainage material such as broken brick, crock, crushed stone, or anything of that sort. Then put in a layer of the sod you have taken off the bed—if you have sod—grass side down, or put in a layer of leaves, about three inches thick. Then put in the best soil you have, with rotted manure, humus, or rich compost, mixed with ordinary garden loam. If the trial bed is not too large, I would sift the soil and add to it some bone meal, working it in thoroughly. This may seem a great deal of trouble but it will pay in the end, for it makes a wonderful bed in which to start plants.

Planting the seeds after a soaking rain is the best possible start to give them, but lacking this a thorough soaking of the bed with the hose will answer. Let it be thoroughly saturated until it refuses to absorb any more water. Do not plant the seed until the surface soil has dried out.

Hollyhocks, Foxgloves, Delphinium, Gaillardia, Sweet William, Pansies, Columbines, Painted Daisies and many others may be started in this way. If a stock of late blooming flowers is desired, plant seed that you have saved, or buy from the most reliable seedsmen you know. Anyway get a start on next year's garden by starting a seed bed within the next few weeks.

Do not remove seedlings to their permanent locations until next spring. If it is desired to give protection during winter, a covering of leaves may be placed over them. Do not cover until after the first light frost.

NOTE—The writer will consider it a pleasure to answer questions concerning the garden in this column. The questions should be addressed to the writer in care of the Editor. The answer will appear in an early issue or if a personal reply is desired a stamped, self-addressed envelope should be enclosed.

HELP OTHERS TO HELP YOU

Mother Earth is mankind's best provider. She produces everything we wear—everything we eat—and everything that shelters us. In brief, Mother Earth has made life possible.

So it is with our city and our merchants. Our success is dependent upon their success. We must support them or they will retrograde. We are to them what the plow is to the field.

In other words, sustain our merchants by BUYING AT HOME. The good will of the buying public is the goal of the modern seller. Without it, they cannot exist.

Back up your merchants and you prosper with them. By boosting the "Buy at Home" movement you help put your community on the map.
