and games, small appliances, magazines, greeting cards, and garden supplies.

The Jewel store also will feature a gourmet produce and ready-to-eat counter, where foods will be individually prepared to the customer's order. "Whatever the customer wants in the way of food, we want to provide it," said William Newby of the Jewel sales development department.

The Jewel-Osco building is located almost exactly on the site of the former Teatro del Lago Theater. A Howard Johnson Restaurant is being built immediately southeast of it and an L-shaped building containing smaller specialty shops and rental office space will be completed next summer north of the Jewel-Osco store.

The center is part of a $12 million development of No Man's Land by Evanston lawyer Plato Fofas and three North Shore associates: Joseph Stefan and William F. Souder, both of Winetka, and Mrs. Edwin Hadley of Highland Park.

"We regard this site as one of our best ones, and we are happy to blend it into the Spanish theme," he said. "We believe it will enable us to offer a unique merchandising experience to shoppers."
