Garden Talks

(Contributed by the Wilmette Garden Club)

In our florist's window, on Wilmette avenue, are suggestions for winter bouquets. In the center is a beautiful basket of autumn leaves, Chinese lanterns, cat-tails, grasses, and the like, in their natural colors of red and brown.

Quite different this from the winter baskets of a few years ago when the "painted weeds" were the fad and weeds which had been gilded, silvered, and painted were arranged in vase or basket for a winter decoration. Quite different, too, from the flowers and leaves made of painted shells, or the autumn leaves of painted cloth and wire or the tissue paper roses, or the wax flowers, that in turn served as winter bouquets. Fad after fad in artificial flower and leaf had its day and passed on, and each time we turned thankfully from the artificial leaves and flowers to the natural branches of berries, leaves, and seed pods, for our winter bouquet.

There are many lovely sprays of berries from shrubs and vines to arrange for the house. Of these the holly is a favorite because of its grace and the bright color of its berries. Another one that is a beauty is the little wine-red herry that grows in graceful clusters on a light sage-colored stem which carries narrow leaves of the same shade; this comes from California. Others are the wax-coated bayberry, and the arrow wood with its blue-black berries. At Christmas time, what artificial holly or mistletoe from a box in the attic can take the place of real holly and mistletoe? A very decorative bush is the barberry, with its bright red berries and red and gold leaves. The snowberry, is another.

In our Wilmette woods we find the wild rose with its beautiful colored berries and foliage, the low plant that has the round clusters of grape-like berries, the wild spikenard, and the showy berries of Jack-in-the-Pulpit, to gather for winter.

The Chinese lantern is a great favorite. So is the milkweed pod and the cat-tail. A newer favorite is the silver shilling (also known as the poverty plant and the money plant), white, transparent, delicate ovals on long stems.

Among the dried plants used are the heather, baby's breath, tansy, strawflowers, which make quaint nosegays, the coxcomb and the hydrangea and grasses and trailing vines.

VISIT COLLEGE

Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Larson of 885 Vernon avenue, Glencoe, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Anderson, 1317 Maple avenue, Wilmette, and Miss Blanche Anderson of Chicago drove to Wheaton Sunday to spend the day with Miss Inez Larson, who has just entered her junior year at Wheaton college. Shortly before her return she entertained several of her college friends at her home in Glencoe. Last week Miss Larson was elected one of the directors of her literary society.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Crossly, 417 Washington avenue, Wilmette, entertained on Monday of this week at a dinner and bridge party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Newton, formerly of Wilmette but now of Pittsburgh. Mr. and Mrs. Newton are here for a short stay on business.

Mrs. Edwin Hedrick, 304 Melrose avenue, Kenilworth, has as her guests for two weeks, her mother, Mrs. Melvin T. Roberts, and her sister, Mrs. C. T. Aims, of Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. Frank Cheesman of Evanston entertained her sewing club at the Orrington hotel on Friday of this week.

Dupre, Organist. Gives Recital in Winnetka Nov. 18

Marcel Dupre, the brilliant organist of the Paris Conservatoire, who is to give a recital in Christ church, Winnetka, Monday evening, November 18, comes of a family long associated with the finest standards of music. His paternal grandfather Aimable Dupre, was organist at the great organ of St. Maclon at Rouen for thirty-seven years. His maternal grandfather, Etienne Chauviere was choirmaster at the Church of St. Patrice at Rouen for thirty years. Dupre's father, Albert Dupre, a member of the Rouen Academy, and a famous conductor, has played the magnificent organ at the beautiful Church of St. Ouen at Rouen for eleven years with great success. He was a pupil and close friend of the great Guilmant, and the traditions of this master have been handed down from father to son. Dupre's mother, Alice Dupre, is an accomplished pianist, cellist and singer.

With such a musical ancestry it is not surprising that young Marcel should have given signs of his predestined vocation at an early age. In his games and conversations he exhibited a fixed passion for organs, drawing pictures of them on paper, on the walls of the home, and even collecting wood to make parts of the instrument himself. When four years old, he heard Widor play at the dedication of the great organ at St. Ouen, and immediately determined to become an organist.

At seven he commenced the study of music seriously. At eight he played Bach for Guilmant, who consented to take him as a pupil. At ten he appeared in public as a virtuoso, beginning a career which has been a long series of triumphs. At twelve he was appointed organist of the Grand Organ in the Church of St. Vivien at Rouen, becoming a pupil of Guilmant at the same time. His first important composition, an oratorio, "Jacob's Dream," was performed in 1901, when Dupre was 15 years old. He then entered the Paris Conservatory where he took the first prize in piano when 19 years old, first prize in organ under Guilmant at 21, first prize in fugue under Widor, at 23, and at 28 won the supreme honor, the Grand Prix de Rome, for his cantata, "Psyche." His extraordinary feat of playing the entire works of Bach from memory in a series of ten recitals at the Paris Conservatory is a matter of history. His American debut was in the Wanamaker Auditorium in 1921.

Joseph Joyces to Pass Winter in Tucson, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Joyce with their daughter, Ruth, 531 Essex road, Kenilworth, left on Thursday by motor for Tucson, Ariz., where they will spend the winter. They do not expect to reach Tucson until next month, intending to make the trip in a leisurely manner, stopping en route at a number of places for several days. In Hot Springs, Ark., they expect to sojourn at least a week, and will go on to Los Angeles from Tucson later in the year. Mr. Joyce will probably return to Kenilworth in several months on business, but will again join his family in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Boddie of 1356 Greenwood circle were among those attending the Columbus Day dinner given by the Pan-American Consular corps at the Belden-Stratford hotel last Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Irwin who have been spending the summer with their daughter, Mrs. Joseph O. Converse, 1610 Highland avenue, left the latter part of last week for their home in Melbourne, Fla.
