Marshall Field's Celebration of Anniversary Continues This Week; Greet Great Crowds

Crowds have thronged the aisles of the Evanston store of Marshall Field & Company this week to participate in the big store's celebration of its first anniversary in Evanston. The celebration, which began last Friday with a tea at which members of the Evanston Junior League were hostesses, a fashion show, with mannequins displaying the latest styles and many other events throughout the store, will continue through Saturday, Nov. 29, when the store will remain open until 9 at night as usual.

The anniversary celebration will come to a climax Friday and Saturday when the store re-opens after the Thanksgiving holiday. The enlarged Toy section will open Friday and Santa Claus, jollier than ever, will arrive to greet the children. A feature of his arrival will be a bagful of toys from which children may "grab" a toy at ten cents a grab.

At that time the store will take on a Christmas atmosphere, with carol singers strolling throughout the store singing Christmas carols, attractive decorations and displays for Christmas and gift suggestions on every hand. At 11:30 Saturday morning, Edith Heal, author of "How the World Began" will talk to children in the book section on the third floor. On the fourth floor Miss Maude Thompson will give informal fashion talks, while mannequins display new fabric fashions.

The holiday tables, set by members of the Junior league, will be on exhibit until the celebration ends Saturday evening, and the exhibit of lithographs and etchings by Jerome Robert Cerny, well known Lake Forest architect, also will remain.

Saturday, the final day, there will be a book party for children in the book section and afterwards children are invited to go to the second floor and shake hands with Santa Claus.

Chester Persing Initiated Into Fraternity Unit

Chester Persing, New Trier High school English teacher and a member of the school's football coaching staff, was one of six candidates initiated into Upsilon chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, national education fraternity, Tuesday night of this week at Harris hall on the Northwestern university campus. Upsilon chapter is the Northwestern university chapter of the fraternity.

O. A. Oaks, another New Trier High school teacher, is president of the chapter. H. H. Herron, also a member of the New Trier faculty, had charge of the initiation.

At the meeting of Upsilon chapter Tuesday night plans were discussed for an open meeting sponsored by the chapter which will be held at Evanston Township High school Tuesday, December 9, when Supt. William J. Bogan of the Chicago public schools will speak. Men teachers of New Trier, Evanston and Deerfield High schools and superintendents and principals of grammar schools on the north shore and in Chicago have been invited to attend this meeting.

U. Theater to Enter Musical Revue Field

One field of the stage never before touched by the Northwestern University theater, that of the musical revue, will be the subject of its next production. The show has been named "Scrap-Book" because of the variety of its parts. It will be presented Dec. 8, 9, 10 and 11 at Annie May Swift hall.

This production will stand out also because it will be part of the Junior promenade week festivities, and is planned in keeping with the new policy of Garrett Leverton, director, to make the University theater a house of entertainment for the students.

Twenty-two skits, many of them comedies of college life, and numbers by a trained dancing and singing chorus will compose the revue. Music will consist of songs from some of the recent professional shows, to be played by a student orchestra conducted by Floyd Eldridge.

The cast of 75 is being directed jointly by Joe Miller, who with Eldridge and Darrell Ware was author of "Whoa There," the Men's Union-W. A. A. musical comedy which last year won $1,000 prize offered by Universal Pictures and College Humor, and by John Baird of the school of speech faculty.

Joseph Kneip's parents, who live in Chicago, were Mr. and Mrs. Kneip's guests for Thanksgiving dinner at their home, 1714 Washington avenue.
