Baha'i Temple to Be Opened at Convention Here

The first temple in the West dedicated to the principle of religious unity will be formally opened when delegates and visitors convene on May 1, 2 and 3, in Wilmette, for the twenty-third annual convention of American Baha'is, according to an announcement issued by the National Spiritual Assembly this week.

"In the Baha'i Temple now rapidly nearing completion, except for the detailed external and interior decoration, the American people," it is stated, "are given the first visible symbol of the ideals of religious peace and social brotherhood which have inspired the true spiritual teachers of humanity in all parts of the world since the dawn of time. Through this edifice, raised in fulfillment of the world message uttered by Baha'u'llah more than fifty years ago, it will be possible to put into actual demonstration the longings for amity and cooperation hitherto frustrated by the separation of people into different sects and creeds. The fact that this symbol has been created in the heart of the American continent testifies convincingly that America is not dominated by materialistic motives but rather animated by the instinct to produce the outer conditions necessary in order to make human dreams 'come true.' The greatest of all visions inspiring the soul of man is universal peace. It is as an expression of this evolutionary urge that Baha'is consider this temple a vital contribution to the forces making for world civilization at this time."

The mission of Baha'u'llah, his followers declare, was a renew man's faith in the universality of God at a time when unfaith and social decadence are threatening wars and revolutions at all weak points in the political structure. The teachings of Baha'u'llah, it is said, have penetrated far and wide not merely because they are imbued with enthusiastic faith in the religious nature of man, but because they uphold a world order as the end and aim of human evolution in this age. The effect of the Baha'i Faith, its followers point out, is to remove racial, class and sectarian prejudice, and its moral standards are claimed to be a powerful influence making for an enlargement of the area of social cooperation.

"The Baha'i convention," the Assembly announcement states, "will be composed of a body of ninety-five delegates elected by the local Baha'i communities in fifty cities of the United States and Canada. Similar conventions are to be held in England, Germany, Egypt, Iraq, Persia, India and Australia."
