

Architects Show New Home Plans at Glencoe Exhibit

With the announcement that over twenty-five prominent architects have submitted plans and perspectives of fine homes for the Architects' Exhibit now being held at 1015 Elm Ridge drive, Skokie Ridge, Glencoe, the invitation is extended to the public to visit the Early American section of this unusual display which continues until May 2.

A glance through the list of contributing architects reveals individuals and firms who have long achieved distinction throughout the country for their creations in modern progressive architecture.

Intensive study has been made of the problems and demands of today's home owner, and in the presentations now on exhibition each requirement is clearly met. The plans prepared for this exhibit are complete in every detail, the newest and most modern methods of construction in steel and concrete arrangement of rooms, placing of furniture, and other features are included to formulate an immediate and accurate visualization of the home before its completion.

Creative Skill Displayed

Perspective drawings of exteriors, along with landscaping treatment, interior sketches and arrangements—beautifully mounted—have been submitted for the first time for this exhibit. Careful study has been given to detail in order to insure the utmost individuality for each home. With representation of notable creative skill, the group on display for the visiting public is such as has seldom been offered on the north shore.

The Early American group, showing six to eleven rooms in a range of periods and styles, is on display from April 19, to May 2 daily, from 11 a. m. to 9 p. m. Following in order will be groups comprising other styles of architecture, including English, French, and Contemporary. The public is cordially invited to attend all showings.
