Natural Gas to Be Distributed Late in Summer

In view of current speculation among householders concerning the advent of natural gas, J. W. Kehoe, district manager of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, has prepared a statement applying to towns in this section which the company supplies with gas. The statement, containing all the information available at this time, according to Mr. Kehoe, reads as follows:

"The thousand-mile pipeline bringing natural gas from the Texas Panhandle fields to the Chicago area at a cost of about $75,000,000, is now nearing completion. The natural gas from this line will be delivered to certain distribution points throughout the Chicago area where it will be mixed with the gas manufactured locally. Just when customers will receive the resultant new gas is not known now, but in all probability it will be some time around September 1.

"The difference in heating value between the present gas and that to be distributed at the introduction of natural gas will make it necessary that gas burning appliances be re-adjusted for the satisfactory burning of the new fuel. The Public Service company will make these adjustments, at the time of the change, with little inconvenience to the customer.

"With the price of the natural gas delivered to Chicago not yet determined, no announcement can be made at this time as to the cost of the new gas to the customer. Upon the arrival of the new gas the company expects, however, to make immediately a very substantial reduction in rates for gas used for homes."
