

Wilmette Minister Goes to Pastorate at Norwood, Mass.

The Rev. William F. English, Jr., 729 Ninth street, for several years vice-president of Rockford college in charge of its development program, will leave Wilmette December 1 to assume the pastorate of the First Congregational church in Norwood, Mass.

Mr. English, Jr., is the son and grandson of clergymen, his father, the Rev. William F. English, Ph.D. of Hartford, Conn., being the assisting superintendent and treasurer of the Missionary Society of Connecticut.

He is a graduate of Dartmouth college and of Hartford Theological seminary. Following pastorates in Westbrook, Conn., Saco, Maine, and Lowell, Mass., he was appointed district secretary of the American board of foreign congregational missions for the interior states in 1920 with headquarters in Chicago. With the merger of the denominational offices in 1926, Mr. English was elected the first general executive secretary of the Commission on Missions and had a large share in the development of the new organization.

From 1926 to 1929 Mr. English served as central division manager in the financial campaign to establish a 15 million dollar endowment for the six American colleges in the Near East. Upon the completion of this fund he assumed the vice-presidency of Rockford college in charge of its development program with plans for increased endowment and the constructing of a new college plant.

In accepting the call to the First Congregational church in Norwood, Mass. Mr. English assumes the leadership in a large and responsible parish work. The Norwood church has a membership of over 900 and a Church school of some 600, one of the largest in the Boston area. Mr. and Mrs. English, with their daughter Elizabeth, have been residents of Wilmette since 1922.

Mrs. English has been actively identified with the social life of Wilmette, and for several years was chairman of the program committee of the North Shore Musicians' club.
