All-Day Program at Woman's Club

Opening of Psychology Course, Music, and Talk by Drama Expert Chosen for Jan. 11

The beginning of a course of lectures in psychology, particularly "The Menace of a Stale Psychology," and a drama lecture on "Fashions in the American Audience," with luncheon and the singing of Miss Kathleen Sauerwald, contralto, intervening, comprise the program planned for members of the Woman's club of Wilmette at the next all-day session Wednesday, January 11. Dr. E. W. Balduf, lecturer and educator, speaks in the morning at 10:30 o'clock, and in the afternoon at 2. Harold A. Ehrensperger will appear before the club.

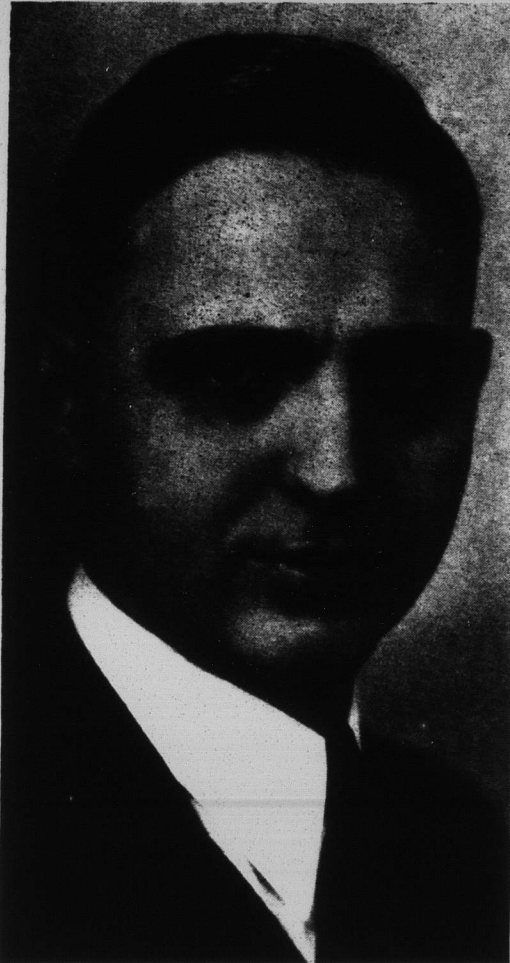

Emery W. Balduf is qualified by a rich and varied experience as a college instructor and administrator, to speak on educational topics. Although he does not pose as a specialist in the field of child psychology or child guidance, he is said to have the broad training in psychology which any successful educator must have. He began his educational career as superintendent of schools and in that capacity frequently taught in the primary grades and was acclaimed by his primary teachers as an expert in dealing with children on the lower levels. His main experience, however, covers a period of twenty years in dealing with boys and girls in the adolescent period and later adolescence. In his own institution, the Central Y. M. C. A. College of Arts and Sciences of Chicago, of which he is dean, he has set up a personnel service which enjoys a wide reputation as a specimen of scientific counseling and guidance. His talks will center largely around a wealth of case material gleaned from actual experience.

Dr. Balduf asks that members bring paper and pencil for an open forum discussion at the end of his talk.

Harold A. Ehrensperger, an experienced lecturer fortified by fifteen years of not only study but actual experience, bases his talk on drama as he himself knows it. He is interested and active in the making of drama. As national executive secretary of the Drama league at the high point of its activity, he has had opportunity not only to know the professional stage, but also to help found and watch the growth of the little theater movement. Few men, it is said, know both the professional and amateur stage as well as he.

He has been an instructor at Northwestern university; he has been professor of drama and poetry at Garrett Graduate School of Theology, where he was also director of personnel. He has visited Europe twice to become thoroughly conversant with the theater on the continent where he visited ninety-seven theaters. He has been a director, and has had six years' experience as editor of the Little Theater Monthly department of the Drama magazine. Mr. Ehrensperger has lectured about the theater from the viewpoint of director, author, actor, and is said to combine in his talks deep knowledge, unbiased judgment, a real wit, a dynamic personality, and an experience which gives him poise, charm, and unvarying success. He is said to have many ideas about the theater

In Course at Woman's Club

Dr. Emery W. Balduf, proclaimed by critics as "most delightful and inspiring," "interesting, clear, and forceful," "a brilliant speaker" and one "thoroughly qualified to discuss modern educational problems," is to be presented to members of the Woman's Club of Wilmette in a psychology course which will be divided into four lectures. The first talk is to be given next Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, the others on Monday mornings at 10 o'clock, on January 16, 23 and 30.

Dr. Balduf is known as a militant exponent of the necessity of scientific thinking in all fields. He is said to be a liberal rather than a conservative, a critical and independent thinker. He lays great stress upon informal adult education as a means of opening up the minds of those who control educational policies. Each new generation, he holds, must do creative thinking of its own to meet the ever-emerging problems of a rapidly shifting social situation. He is highly recommended by eminent educators and psychologists.
