

Adolescent Child Subject of Last Balduf Lecture

The emotional conflicts affecting the relations of husband and wife and resulting from the increasing desire of women to express themselves in the world at large; the effect of these upon the children; problems confronting parents of adolescent children; and, lastly the plea for the establishment of psychology services in educational centers and in health centers, formed the basis of the talk on "Houses of Human Welfare" which completed the course of four lectures in psychology given by Dr. Emery W. Balduf at the Woman's club of Wilmette Monday morning. These talks, his hearers declare, have been sane, thought-provoking, helpful. They have been given under the auspices of the child and home department of the club of which Mrs. Ray S. Warren is chairman.

Standards Change

The old standard that made man the provider and woman just the wife and mother, with her place entirely in the home, is being broken down, Dr. Balduf declared. With that change have come emotional conflicts which are reflected on the sensitive mind of the child, especially the adolescent child, the speaker remarked. Women wish to express themselves in the world and are no longer content to be just wives and mothers and the time will come, he believes, when a woman can choose her life in the world just as she wants to. Women, now, are more limited, and what they can do is guided by the needs of their children. This chafing against the coming of a new order breeds conflict, and needs to have more cooperation and adjustment on the part of husbands and wives to effect a peaceful solution, Dr. Balduf emphasized. Women, he pointed out, have as much right to express themselves in the world through their talents, as men have, and this new standard he considers to be inevitable.

Must Achieve These Ends

In dealing with the adolescent child, Dr. Balduf named three things parents should teach their children, namely, (1) emancipation from the family; (2) heterosexuality, interest in the opposite sex; (3) the helping of a child to determine a vocation along some particular talent so that he can express himself fruitfully.

Dr. Balduf then took up these points in detail. In commenting upon the first he stated that it is not necessary to "expel a child from the family, but wean it away." If that is not done "adult infantilism" results. In achieving this end parents, he urged, should be not too inquisitive, nor disinterested, but should keep a middle ground and should take keen interest in all that he does so that he may feel his parents are his friends, and make them his confidants. The adolescent child should be made self-sufficient, a thinking individual. Parents, Dr. Balduf stressed, should be sure to give a child facts so that he learn to face things as they are.

Urges Adjustment

In the second point, Dr. Balduf urged that adolescent children be taught adjustment with those of the other sex, and in this regard he expressed his approval of co-education, which he said is "A natural biological situation, and we live biological lives." Girls and boys should know each other as they are in every day life, not just as they are on "holiday behavior." School offers this normal, every-day comradeship.

Parents' Part

In speaking of vocations the speaker suggested that parents discover their adolescent child's particular talent and inclinations. To help him develop this effectively, Dr. Balduf urged parents to get all possible facts to help guide the child, and to obtain a broad, general foundation which makes for the continuity of interests and successful living together.

His "Houses of Human Welfare," are places where, if established in education and health centers, as he so urgently desires, problems concerning normal adolescent children, their development, and their guidance can be worked out effectively, happily.

Kenilworth Holds Father-Son Banquet

The annual banquet for Kenilworth fathers and sons is an event of this Friday evening at the Kenilworth club, at 6:30 o'clock. Harry E. Weese, Walter A. Knoop, and Harry A. Olin are hosts for the occasion. This affair is the third of its kind and every boy is instructed by the club, to come and bring his "dad." "Every dad and boy in Kenilworth is cordially invited," and it doesn't make any difference whether they are members of the Kenilworth club or not, it is emphasized.

Special entertainment is provided for the evening, which will start promptly and not last late.

Bob Townley will make his annual presentation of football letters and other insignia for the 1932 season, aided by several of Northwestern's football stars. An orchestra "with plenty of zip" will furnish the music, and the "Gold Dust Twins, fresh from a triumphal tour of the Pacific coast, will come in their first Chicago appearance."

In readiness for the event is the freshly decorated lounge with its fresh tint on the walls, new coverings on the furniture and new hangings at the windows.

FORM "TRIBES"

The twenty eight-year-old boys who are members of the Kenilworth Junior Hikers organization have been divided into four "tribes," the Chippewas, Iroquois, Apaches and Comanches. The tribes planned to hold their first big pow wow on the lake front this week. A hunt for a buried treasure was to be one of the main features of the pow wow. Robert W. Townley, director of physical education at the Joseph Sears school in Kenilworth, has charge of the Junior Hikers.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee" (Jeremiah 31:3).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "That God is a corporeal being, nobody can truly affirm. . . . Not materially but spiritually we know Him as Divine Mind, as Life, Truth, and Love. We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love Him understandingly, waring no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God" (p. 140).
