

May Refuse Licenses for Sale of Beer in North Shore Towns

Municipal Officials Show Inclination to Adhere to Pro-Volsteadian Regulations

Attorneys of the various north shore cities and villages from Evanston to Highland Park are to meet within a few days to formulate regulations for the sale of beer, governed in the various municipalities by either the cities and villages act or charter restrictions under which the several communities are operating.

This action was taken at a meeting of official representatives of north shore communities held in the Council chamber at the Winnetka Village hall Monday evening. It was the second meeting of this nature held on the shore, and a third conference is to be called in the near future, it is announced, to hear the report of the attorneys.

Oppose Counter Sales

At the meeting Monday evening it was the consensus of opinion that there should be no consumption of beer on the premises where it is sold, neither should there be storage of beer there. Sales, it was felt, should be limited to case lots, and delivery made from the point of storage to the home.

The second meeting of representatives of these cities and villages was called following the recent action by the Illinois legislature which gives cities and villages the right to regulate and license the sale of all beverages having an alcoholic content of not more than 3.2 percent and which also provides that no state license may be issued unless the applicant has first secured a municipal license.

Would Refuse Licenses

In regard to the municipal license question, it was pointed out that the charter villages cannot license, and as to the municipalities under the cities and villages act, it was suggested they pass an ordinance prohibiting the sale of beer without a license, while at the same time there would be no provision for licensing.

This, it was explained, would enable such municipalities to handle any violations of the proposed ordinance, and, at the same time, place such cities and villages on a uniform basis with charter villages.

Show Dry Sentiment

The sentiment prevailed that it is desirable to retain the condition on the north shore as it was before the passage of the Volstead act.

The north shore, it was pointed out, has been settled by families who came here, among other reasons, because of the provisions which prohibited the traffic in beer and other such beverages, and it is felt that it would be a mistake to let down the bars in any degree, on this condition.
