PUBLIC FORUM

A NUISANCE

Editor, WILMETTE LIFE:

Will some one kindly inform me, as to the reason for the very strong odor of hot oil noticed during these summer months? It is not to be expected that any one is using an oil burner for the heating of their rooms in the hot weather. Oil burner salesmen all offer as an inducement to buy, that the heater they represent has no odor or dirt. That the only time they can smell or throw of soot is when they are improperly adjusted or using a poor grade of oil. If this is the case, why not place some of our unemployed at the task of locating these poorly adjusted burners; report them to the Fire Chief, whom I believe has the office of inspector of oil burners; then have him insist upon proper adjustment of such burners. With a north or northeast wind, the odor is so strong at times in the eleven hundred block on Greenwood avenue that it is fairly choking. The worst hours seem to be about noon and again from six to seven in the evening. Also black balls of soot are to be found on steps and window ledges. Cannot some engineer work out a relief for this nuisance?

Yours truly,
Clara Nourse.

Editor's note: In response to an inquiry Village Manager C. M. Osborn stated that the odors complained of were probably due to sewer gas rather than to oil fumes, adding that this trouble is usually prevalent during dry summers. With a good rain, said Mr. Osborn, and the consequent filling of man-holes with water, the nuisance will likely be abated.
