

She's a perfect hostess—

and she's equally good at checking a battery

You'd never suspect from watching Mrs. Stone welcoming her guests for an afternoon of bridge that she also personally looks after the servicing of the Stone car, checking its tires, the battery, keeping the radiator full, seeing that the oil is changed every thousand miles and that it gets proper lubrication.

And she's not a mechanic either. She's simply a competent housewife who's found that with the help of Cheerful Stan at the nearest Standard Station she can do a better job of taking care of the car than by leaving it to Mr. Stone, who like most husbands does it when he can find the time.

The next time the head of the house says, "The car needs to be checked over, but I don't see when I'm going to find time for it," why don't you take the job off his hands and drive the car in for service yourself? Standard Servismen will do the job as carefully and correctly for you as if your husband were there to supervise them.
