

Evanston Invites Traffic Police to "School" Sessions

School bells will ring out for traffic officers of Illinois and surrounding states October 9 when the Midwest Police conference convenes at Evanston for an intensive two-week training school.

This unique short course is being arranged by the Evanston Police department and Northwestern university in cooperation with the traffic committee of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Any traffic officer is eligible, and it is expected that a large number of municipalities will send representatives.

Have Ambitious Schedule

A full schedule is planned, with classes all morning and all afternoon six days a week. An imposing faculty has been drafted from metropolitan police departments, the National Safety council, National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, Northwestern university and other organizations.

Four subjects will be studied thoroughly during the morning classes the first week. They are: legislation, organization of the traffic department, training of officers, and traffic planning. Morning sessions during the second week will be devoted to mobile control of traffic, accident investigation, arrests and court work, and educational work.

Important Field Program

Probably the most interesting phase of the school will be the laboratory and field work, which will occupy the afternoons during the entire course. The "students" will learn how to investigate accidents, how to make parking surveys, how to make traffic counts, how to compute critical speeds at dangerous intersections, and other scientific methods of preventing accidents and facilitating traffic flow. The officers will also be given an opportunity to visit the Chicago and Evanston police departments and study in detail the traffic engineering and enforcement methods used.

HOUSEGUESTS

Mrs. Edward Mendsen, 531 Eighth street, had as houseguests last week her granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Kline, and Mrs. C. E. Boice, both of Minneapolis. Miss Kline is a granddaughter and Mrs. Boice is a daughter of General Joseph B. Sanborn of Chicago.

Thomas J. Lynch Gets State Game and Forest Post

Thomas J. Lynch of 1131 Greenbay road, Glencoe, and head of Thomas J. Lynch, Inc., tree surgeons, with offices at 874 Center street, Winnetka, has been placed in charge of the Chicago office of the Illinois state department of conservation.

Mr. Lynch was advised of his appointment to this important office this week by C. F. Thompson, acting director of the department. All of Cook and Lake counties comprise the territory under the jurisdiction of the Chicago office.

Enforce Game Laws

Mr. Lynch will have under his direction a staff of ten or more investigators who are appointed by the director of the department at Springfield. There are no more game wardens, as heretofore maintained, and the forestry department has also been placed under the department of conservation.

The Chicago office is located in the Foreman Bank building, 33 North LaSalle street. From here is directed the enforcement of all fish and game laws, the investigation of reported violations and the inspection of fur shops.

It is under the direction of this department that the lakes in the two counties are seined for the removal of carp which are replaced by game fish. The department operates on receipts from hunting and fishing licenses.

True sportsmen readily comply with the laws of the conservation department, it is explained, and those who do not, will be vigorously prosecuted, according to Mr. Lynch. Reports of violations coming to the department will be thoroughly investigated, he said.

Retains Private Business

In assuming the duties of his new office Mr. Lynch explained that while he will direct its activities from the Chicago office he will continue as president of the tree surgery company bearing his name, and that Charles C. Williamson, who joined the company this spring, as manager of the landscaping department, will be in charge when Mr. Lynch is absent.
