While looking through some old books recently Mrs. E. C. Levy, 1016 Linden arenue, Wilmette, found a copy of the New York Herald of April 15, 1865, a portion of the first page of which is reproduced above. The paper is age-yellowed and so frail that it can be handled only with extreme care. Aside from the thrilling accounts of the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln and the attempts upon the lives of Secretary of State Seward and his brother, there is an interesting angle to the paper in showing the difference in style between newspapers of that time and the metropolitan dailies of the present. The very small type than used would bring numerous complaints if used today. Mrs. Levy attaches considerable value to the copy as an historic relic.
