Arden Shore Again Invites Its Friends To Picnic July 15

Arden Shore camp is to have another annual Picnic day Monday, July 15. Picnic day is open house day at the camp situated in wooded acres along the bluff at the edge of the lake just north of Lake Bluff on Sheridan road.

Picnic day is the occasion in summer especially open to visitors who bring their picnic luncheons, inspect the camp, and enjoy a program by the campers themselves. It is a day open to all friends of Arden Shore wishing to see life as it is lived at camp, either to see it for the first time, or again to discover what changes may have come between the closing of one season and the opening of another.

Each of the boards in the north shore villages always has a representative group of its own members and their friends present. For the last year or two, when the weather has made it possible, picnic tables have been placed out under the trees, one set apart for each village, so that residents of each town may picnic together. Arden Shore camp serves coffee and tea, and when the weather has been hot, it has hospitably offered its guests a refreshing beverage during the afternoon program.

The little screened brown cottages built here and there throughout the shady grounds are open proudly for inspection on Picnic day—so are the larger cottages for groups of boys and of girls, and many such there are at Arden Shore. The administration building, the auditorium, the library, the hospital, the Baby Fold, the beach house, and other buildings, many of them memorials, stand with doors ajar in welcome.

The board of the Arden Shore association usually meets in the morning. After picnickers have had their lunches, they all gather on the green, to sit on benches arranged in a semi-circle for the program. To this program mothers and grandmothers, boys and girls, and even the smallest babies come, to join with the guests for the entertainment. Many of the campers, or rather the adults, and most of the children, take part in the program itself, which in games, and songs, little drama sketches, and dances, give a brief but enlightening glimpse into the training, education, and recreation that go into every day at camp.

Music, as exemplified by the orchestra and glee club, nature study, and the training in swimming and life-saving too, always come in for their share, and a special exhibition in swimming is held on the beach in the afternoon for the guests. A little pageant and an exhibition of hand-made articles have been arranged for Monday's guests.

Friendliness is in the air at Arden Shore. One feels it from the moment she drives into the grounds to be met by one or more of the mannerly boys of the camp who suggest where a car may be parked and are eager to proffer information to those who come for the first time. With this same friendliness Arden Shore sends out its invitation to newcomers and to
