GALA OCCASION

Friday the thirteenth proved to be the luckiest date for Girl Scouts—they never do believe in jinxes—for their mother-daughter dinner was a most happy and gala occasion for them—from the gay orange and bronze "mums" on the tables, the orange and green posters, the green dresses with gold scarfs of the girls themselves and the orange and green booklets and programs to the bright gaiety of the speakers, and the treble voices of the girls in their scout songs.

The troop mothers were table hostesses, the Council members were waitresses, the members of the badge examiners were the guests of honor with the members of the advisory committee and their wives—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson and Reverend Amos Thornburg—and the special guests, Dr. and Mrs. Carleton, President and Mrs. Harry Kinne, Henry Fowler, chairman of the Boy Scouts, and Mrs. C. G. Shearon, chairman of the Central P.T.A.

The commissioner, Mrs. Ira L. Reynolds, introduced the guests and then Miss Susan Lyons told why she liked the "American Girl," the national magazine of the Scouts. (The coming week being Book Week, copies of this magazine will be on exhibit at the library).

Mrs. S. B. Groves, whom the children enjoy so much in their civics and history classes, gave a talk on her work as badge examiner for the Citizen badge, and what fun she and the children have together going over the fundamentals that make for competent junior citizens taking their share of the responsibility in the community. She has no set list of questions that are as easy to answer as when the fairy Queen asked the Princess if she liked pie!

It was quite fitting, so near Armistice day, that L. P. Dennoyer, instructor and examiner for the world knowledge and the world interpreter badges, should talk of the friendships and international understandings that the Scouts strive for in their work.

for that award. He showed an interesting map showing where there were Girl Scout troops all over the world when he and Mrs. Dennoyer, the deputy-commissioner, went around the world a few years ago, and that now Germany and Italy were the two countries which no longer had troops of Scouts but now had organizations of girls with extreme nationalism as their binding tie.

Mrs. Dennoyer who is leader of troop II, had a most interesting and informative exhibit illustrating the various badges—the home canner exhibit being fruit that her girls had canned this fall—a miniature garden, a collection of sea life, handicrafts, and many other interesting exhibits that may be seen at her Hobby Show for her troop next week.

NATURE TRIP

Mrs. H. J. Dernehl and her camp committee will have a trip to the Thatcher Woods, Saturday, November 21. From the Chicago Daily News of September 21 the following is quoted:

"Beside the crows, raccoons, porcupines, snakes, bullfrogs and squirrels and various small snails living lustily at Chicago's only official and permanent field exhibit of creatures with the breath of life in them, the Trailside museum in River Forest contains a very fine set of mounted specimens that will help any student of local wild life to his identification.

"I know I learned more about butterflies and moths in a few minutes at the handsome case of Lepidoptera there than many books could teach me. I was delighted, too, with the splendid outlay of our local quadrupeds. I know, a stuffed specimen looks so fearfully stunted! But it is not the policy of the Trailside museum to keep a lot of native creatures unhappily caged. And a stuffed specimen is worth a lot more than a picture in a book, or a dry-as-dust systematic description.

"The exhibit of birds is also top notch. I offered a prize to the child who could name the most correctly, but the game was interrupted; my 6-year-old was already up to twenty-four species when we had to break it off; children learn one thing as easily as another; they learn from mounted specimens more readily, I find, than from living birds who are likely to be jumpy and shy; ability to make accurate field identifications comes slowly even for the adult, and the right place to begin is just such a place as the Trailside museum.

"There are sheets of wild flowers on the tables for everyone to thumb over; the specimens suffer, but what of that; the exhibit is intended to be used and more specimens can be had.

TRAINING COURSE

The leaders training course beginning Monday, November 16 at 7:30 p.m. will continue through the month and until Miss Marcell has given the group eight lessons and demonstrations. This course is for Council members as well as the leaders and those preparing for leadership.
