HAWAIIAN SKYSCRAPERS

For these nimble Hawaiian lads the section rings that circle the palms provide an automatic ladder-type elevator to the top "story" of this Island skyscraper.

Hawaii has a native skyscraper that stands as an excellent example of a self-sufficient economy. It contains most of the elements—including food, drink, clothing and scenery—that minister to man's physical and aesthetic well being. The name of the skyscraper is cocos nucifera. Translated from the scientific this means a coconut palm.

While most of the complexities of modern civilization operate in connection with Hawaii's up-to-date and progressive commercial life, the graceful coconut palm still stands as an interesting contrast to modernity. In many cases, where tall palms line the walks next to the modern buildings of Honolulu's business district, the two types of skyscrapers stand side by side.

Multitude of Uses

The milk and the meat of the inner nut provide food as well as drink. Hats and other articles of clothing can be fashioned from the tree's leaves. These fronds can also be woven into thatches for shelters. The outer husk of the coconut and oils derived from it can be used as fuel; and the earliest Hawaiian candle was made by stringing kukui nuts on the rib of a coco frond.

After it has surrendered its beverage and meat, the coconut shell can be highly polished and utilized for making dishes, bowls and other receptacles. Today buttons and small ornaments are carved from this material.

Rope woven from coconut fibre found many uses in the olden days, when Island fishermen made many of their nets and lines in this manner.

Trade Mark of Hawaii

As an important item of Island scenery the graceful, swaying palm has become a regular trade-mark of Hawaii.

For every nimble-footed Hawaiian lad the section rings that circle the palms at regular intervals provide an automatic ladder-type elevator to the top "story" of these Island skyscrapers.

Home From Interesting Motor Tour in Florida

Mrs. Christine Kipp, 240 Greenleaf avenue, Wilmette, her daughter, Louise, and her son, Alfred, arrived home a week ago Saturday from a five weeks' motor trip to Florida. They drove down the east coast and up the west coast, spending two or three days here and there at whatever place suited their fancy. They returned by way of Chattanooga, Tenn., passing through this part of the south at the loveliest time of the year, when all the fruit trees are in bloom. They were especially intrigued by the candlewick bedspreads made by Georgia mountaineers and hung outside their homes for sale.
