

New Trier Student Wins Music Award

Scholastic, a national magazine of contemporary life and letters for supplementary study in high school classes, has since 1924 been offering prizes to high school boys and girls for creative work in poetry, short story, and essay writing.

It was the purpose of the editors to give the gifted students some recognition for cultural achievements comparable to that which outstanding students in athletics and other popular activities had always received.

This year for the first time a new competition was inaugurated in the field of music, providing for original student compositions in six branches of music, under a national committee of distinguished music leaders. The results of this contest, both in number and quality of entries, has been a happy surprise to its sponsors.

There were three prizes offered for a piano solo composition. The first prize was won by Betty Jean Crawford, 16 years old, of St. Louis; the second prize by Elizabeth Leonard, 14 years old, of Pittsburgh; the third prize was won by David Geppert, 15, of Wilmette a student at New Trier High school.

The judges in the contest were the eminent Harvey Gaul, composer and critic; Dr. Will Earhart of Pittsburgh, and Dr. W. Claude Rosenberry, of Harrisburg, the latter two of the country's foremost music educators. The judges read and played the 969 entries. The work submitted by the contestants was hailed by educators and the Columbia Broadcasting System staff.

Eddie Katz, 15, promising young violinist, also of New Trier High school, won honorable mention for his composition for violin with piano accompaniment.

RAILROADER

Tom Gallagher, eminent railroader, is a familiar figure to hundreds of homeward bound commuters every day as he commands the gates at the Central avenue crossing of the North Western line.

Tom, as he is familiarly known to many villagers, has been stationed at that important crossing for several years on the afternoon and evening shift. Supplementing his regular duties, Tom is a veritable information bureau on the matter of train schedules and can chat intelligently about everything in the operating end of the railroad business, for he has been an engineer and fireman, as well as putting in his quota of years on the "breaking" end of the train. His experience has taken him to many parts of the country, but right now his chief pride is in a splendid record of safety at one of the busiest crossings on the north shore. And as for the "400," well that fellow rates as Tom's pet—next to the little granddaughter at home, of course.
