

Filled Auditorium Spells Success for Juniors' Style Show

The forming of a wedding dress of lace and satin draped on the mannequin by the designer herself, with no cutting of materials, was the climax of the fashion show, which, with bridge and tea, was the annual charity benefit given recently by Junior auxiliary of the Woman's Club of Wilmette. With a veil of tulle and a headdress of flowers and the bouquet of flowers placed in her hands by the "maid," Mrs. Quintin Crawford, the bride left the stage to the strains of a wedding march, to stroll through the aisles in the show's finale.

The large auditorium of the club was completely filled with tables arranged for bridge players and fashion show spectators who watched the many models parade across the stage decorated with two white standards holding bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums, and edged with ferns. The theme of the show was the presentation of the "trousseau of the bride," and the narrator was Miss Jean Hall who announced the shops displaying the fashions and the names of the models.

Lingerie, negligees and housecoats, togs for sports—riding, skating, skiing—daytime frocks and suits, afternoon and evening dresses, and furs for various occasions, all were displayed, even to the little black velvet frock of a small member of a wedding party.

The use of checks and plaids, and of reds was predominant on the fashions modeled. One of the most popular styles was the showing of sister dresses, decidedly Scotch in design. Gay red swirling plaid skirts were topped with black jackets and little Scotch hats of black and the same plaid. The "Scotch" girls stepping onto the stage leading small dogs drew a large burst of applause from the audience. The note of Edwardian era ran through the entire show.

A small hurricane lamp was the prize for each table, and a bottle of toilet water and small packets of powder were "souvenirs" at each. Many major prizes were awarded, too, running a wide gamut of variety.
