At Woman's Club

Folk songs of Russia, with a guitar accompaniment, were sung by Saveli Walevitch, Russian tenor, and interpreted by Ann Whelpley Walevitch at the recent afternoon meeting of the Woman's club of Wilmette. The songs, Mrs. Walevitch said, were created out of the Russians' own experiences. They were the spirit of the people and the creative genius of the Russian people was in them. They were very simple songs and very old.

The Russian, she said, sang these songs to himself and did not care who listened. They were sung in the natural voice.

There were songs of a hunter, of harvesters, of Odessa, of the Volga boatman, of a team of horses, of a Cossack woman, of the village peddler, a bandit, the serfs, and a pilgrim beggar—all strange and unusual and, for the most part, very sad.

Mrs. Walevitch had a beautiful speaking voice and poetical way of interpreting the words and music that her husband sang. Both showed an intense love for the ancient Russian music.

Following the program, tea was served in the lounge where there was an exhibit of photographs of Wilmette people taken by Helen Bal-four Morrison.—F.B.M.

Thrill Thousands

Theatrical Photo

Harry Fetterer, with his "Punch and Judy" show, is at the Methodist church bazaar in Wilmette. This show has thrilled thousands at the World's fair in New York. "For lots of fun, come and see this performance at 4 o'clock and 7:30 o'clock Friday of this week, at the church," the committee urges.
