

Ann Birk Kuper to Read "Play of Moment" April 4

"Shadow and Substance," currently running at the Golden theater in New York, will be presented by Ann Birk Kuper on Monday, April 4, as the next offering in her drama reading series at the North Shore Congregation Israel in Glencoe.

"Shadow and Substance," written by Paul Vincent Carroll, deals with the Catholic church in Ireland—and Mrs. Kuper will read it appropriately dressed in the habit of a nun. While the theme is not new or particularly original, it offers the audience food for thought, and the sheer beauty and conviction of Mr. Carroll's writing is bound to impress even the most jaded theater-goer. It reveals, in part, the manner in which a steadfast believer, a young girl, brings renegades back to the church who have discarded their first principles of faith—faith that for all its inherent sincerity has drifted from its moorings. The role of the young girl is flavored with such restrained honesty that it offers genuine conviction in a characterization that would, with less skillful handling, have been overdone and incredible.

"Shadow and Substance," with its vital appeal in these troubled times of dictatorships and religious intolerance, has proven not only an artistic success, but has been a box-office "sellout" since it opened last September in New York. George Jean Nathan comments: "Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Julie Haydon in a memorable play dealing with Irish religion and several other things . . . 'Shadow and Substance' is the play of the moment."

Mrs. Kuper's reading is open to the general public, and a nominal admission fee will be charged. Tea will be served in the lounge following the performance, which will commence promptly at 2:15 as usual. — M. C. L.
