

Dean

(Continued from Page 1)
 cational Education. (8) The main body of the code does not provide for certification of special teachers in such areas as speech, school psychologists, school nurses, etc. The administrative regulations provide for this certification and, in general, there is reference to the requirements of the agency responsible for the special activity.

It is hoped that the committee can do a sufficiently good job in holding hearings throughout the state so that the formal legal hearings of the State Board of Education will be little more than a formality with all conflicts reconciled before the State Board of Education holds its hearings.

Certification of teachers, as is the case in any registration or licensing of a professional group, is a highly controversial matter. It affects people's salaries, their right to pursue an occupation, loyalty to a particular area of learning, and many other matters close to the heart of teachers. The committee has listened to many conflicting ideas and over the period of its work has tried to make the necessary compromises and present a document that is the best that can be devised from the point of view of meeting high standards in teacher education. It is expected that the best people will be attracted to teaching and that ultimately the consumers and the students will have even better teachers under whom they will pursue their education programs than they've had under the old code.

Industry

(Continued from Page 1)
 fields.

Mr. Wilson indicated that mathematics, electricity, hydraulics, drafting, and the ability to communicate between fellow workers and administrators were requisites for a successful position in industry.

The demand for a greater number of technicians is increasing rapidly. During this age of automation, industry needs individuals who are trained for specific job qualification. As industry becomes more aware of the true value of a technician, who is a specialist; trained by Community Colleges and other comparable institutions, the full contribution of the technician will be magnified many times.

As a result of a study by General Electric, four pertinent recommendations concerning technical training were made.

1. Encourage industry to develop a more uniform understanding of technician's work.

2. Encourage more educational institutions to develop the technical training curriculum.

3. Encourage the unity of all institutions engaged in the education of qualified technicians.

4. Develop closer relationships between the faculties of technical training institutions and industry through activities such as seminars, temporary employment, tours, lectures and conferences to promote a two-way communications for long-range planning of curriculum.

—Robert Ryan

Tempo

Whether by the favor or the frown of that illusive diety, Fate, I became the victim of one of those unique quirks in life which completely unbalances one's rational thought. Last week I met an honest man.

Not unlike an average twentieth century complex man, you could well imagine the incredibility with which I treated the whole unprecedented situation. After all, who would believe that in the year of Our Lord 1959 that such an antiquated animal actually existed.

Now it is a well known concept of history that Abe Lincoln was an honest man — the last honest man — and for that matter, the only officially honest man in history. In fact, there is a segment in society which rationally questions whether such a unique homo sapien ever existed, or perhaps he lived so long ago that he has become the victim of a modern national epic. (Incidentally, I want to establish right here that at the time of said event, I hadn't been "three sheets to the wind".) Well, at any rate one could certainly sympathize with my predicament.

I met the unfortunate chap at the corner of 23rd and State on his hands and knees pursuing an ant which was occupying itself with the task of seeking a hole in the concrete sidewalk into which it might escape. Being a very intellectual individual, as I am, I surveyed the humorous spectacle and decided to make a bit of sport of the poor chap.

"What has the little fellow done?" I chanted. "Stolen your wallet?" The little man's serious eyes studied me and seemed to tolerate my ignorance only by the most pronounced effort.

"Jus' wanna' see one civilized critter 'afore they take me away," he said. Not having yet realized my true station in life, I attempted to reimburse my pride by further bright suggestions. "And how would you alleviate the trying world problems and restore civilization to its proper height?" I asked.

"Kill all the ants — least won't be haunted by the critter's natural instincts 'tord living wit one an 'annudder."

Well, that's the story. The little men with the nets carried him away from his troubles on the sidewalk to a more padded security. You see — they don't believe in honest men, either.

The ant? Oh, we don't talk about ants anymore.

The Editor—

AFL-CIO

(Continued from Page 1)
 ity in promoting a better understanding of how these groups operate within the framework of the Alpena community, and on a larger scale, within the framework of American society. Representatives from industry and management will speak in the near future on the activities of the N.A.M. and the managerial class.

—Clair Frantz

Portable Typewriter Headquarters

The Alpena Printing Studio has for many years offered the largest and finest selection of portable typewriters available. Seven (7) different makes! Full year service guarantee — variety of colors — easy payment terms. Priced from only $68.50 up.

Alpena Printing Studio, Inc.

Phone: ELmwood 4-4107

Sit Down, Arise Lumberjacks

This article refers to an item published in the last issue of The Timber Cruiser, entitled "Arise", in which the author violently attacks the present form of student government at Alpena Community College. It is my opinion that the author of the article is not very well acquainted with the government of our student council.

The main theme of this article was that the "little fellow" does not have any say in what is going to happen in the school.

To this I say, of course he doesn't. After all, the meetings of the student council are only open to all students and there are class representatives elected by the class members. These representatives are glad to discuss with any student the workings of the council or any student problem. If there is feeling expressed for or against an action, the representatives will see to it that something is done.

I believe that many of the students in this school the ones who are referred to in "Arise" as the "little fellows", are just too lazy to do anything about issues, thereby leaving all the work to the student government.

If the student body is so disgusted with the present form of government, I would suggest that they "Arise" and offer something constructive.

—Bob Kurtz

If we did but know how little some enjoy of the great things that they possess, there would not be much envy in the world.

Friendships are fragile things, and require as much care in handling as any other fragile and precious thing.

(Continued from Page 3)

Alpena's Charles Skiba had the ball and was about to sink a basket to trim the lead to four points. He thought he heard a referee's whistle as did nearly all the other players.

Traverse City's Buck Harvey heard no such thing. He took the ball and raced down the floor and sank a two-point for his side. From there, Traverse City caught fire and steadily pulled away. Alpena was behind only nine points 70-61, with three minutes to go.

Moffit Leads Scoring

Art Moffit, Traverse City's veteran center, was the star performer for the night. He sank six baskets and six free throws for a high game total of 18. He also came off the boards with 15 rebounds. Moffit was not charged with a foul. Three other teammates also figured in double digits. Jim Youker and Bob Woodrow counted 14 points and Harvey finished with 13.

For Alpena, Kurtz was the scoring leader with 14 points. He had seven baskets, six in the second half. He missed only five attempts for a solid 55 percentage. Zyblye flipped in six baskets and a charity for 13 points. In the second half, he connected on the first three basket attempts and had a game total of six in 11 shots, also getting 55 percent. Hubert had 12 points, six in each half.

Big Gary Gunderson, six-five pivot came off with seven rebounds.

Fouls proved costly to Alpena, losing its two biggest men (Gunderson and Gary Ilesley). The team totaled 26 personals, Traverse City was charged with six.

From the floor, Alpena led in fielders, 30-26, but made only three free throws compared to 24 for Traverse City.

In the preliminary game, Traverse City chalked up a 40-17 decision which included a 21-9 half-time lead. Alpena jumped off to a 3-0 lead in the opening minutes of play but trailed the rest of the way. Don Witt led the losers with five points. Traverse City's Jerry Hamilton had 17.

Girls Hear Good Grooming Tips

"Good grooming is a must for everyone especially for college girls", was the main theme of the lecture recently given to a group of girls at Alpena Community College.

Personal cleanliness is the foundation for good grooming. In fact, the complaint voiced by many employers is that not enough girls are as careful about this as they should be.

Miss Paula Davison was used as the model while the beauty technician demonstrated the proper techniques for applying cosmetics.

She definitely stated that the object of wearing cosmetics is not to see how thickly you can apply it; but, rather, how skillfully it may be used so that it will not prove noticeable to others. In other words, use make-up so that no one will know you are wearing it.

It is not necessary for a girl to have an expensive wardrobe or to spend a large amount of money on cosmetics to be attractive.

However, there are a number of small items which can add or detract greatly from a girl's appearance. For instance, how many times have you seen an individual who is dressed "fit to kill" but is chewing gum as though her life depended upon it? Or how many girls have you noticed who walk or sit as though they had never heard of the word "posture"?

Little items, such as dirty shoes, jangly bracelets, or neglected fingernails spoil the entire appearance of a person, so let's learn to be neat.

Then, too, many individuals are attractive until they speak. A rasping drawl or a poor use of grammar detracts from any girl's personal appearance.

The lecture was informative to all and we note that it has been heeded by many girls.

For instance, rouge is now being worn, more eyebrows have been plucked and brushed, shoes have been polished, and girls apply shades of lipstick to match their fingernail polish.

Perhaps more will follow in their footsteps in the future.

—Eleanor & Kaye

Pickett's Pharmacy

PRESCRIPTIONS

Lloyd Pickett, B.S.

EL 6-1635

Alpena, Michigan

Fay's Fashions for College Girls

114 Chisholm

Alpena
 Traverse City
 Petoskey
 Charlevoix
 Gaylord
 Cheboygan
 Onaway
 Kalkaska

Alpena