NEW TECHNICAL CENTER AT A.C.C.

Classes began Monday, September 16, in Alpena Community College's new Besser Technical School located across from the Central Hall of the College. This $1 million structure houses the only technical education program in Northern Michigan. The Alpena Community College will be the ninth community college to help meet Michigan's annual need for 12,000 technicians.

Parking Lot Problems Being Studied

In past years, the parking problem at Alpena Community College has always been one of the major problems at the opening of the school year.

Last year's student council designated the area across the street from the college on Johnson Street as the parking facility for Community College students. The "oval" has been reserved for faculty and visitors only. This was the result of students taking advantage of the parking liberties given them. Anybody found violating these infractions will be warned once, fined the second and third time and face possible expulsion the fourth.

Materials being purchased, are signs telling where parking will and will not be permitted. Also, Mr. Thomas Ritter, Student Director, is looking into the possibility of having special student parking permits for their automobiles. Sometime in the spring, plans are being made for the building of two sidewalks, one leading to Besser Tech Center and the other to the parking lot from Central Hall.

Try Using The Library

Is this the semester you've decided to really try to study? Many of us, I'm sure, have solemnly made this promise to ourselves at the start of each semester. With this resolution as our guiding light we charge into our homework and are successful for perhaps all of two weeks.

There are many factors that may call a halt to the glorious plans we had. Perhaps we can't organize our time properly, we may have too many disturbances at home, the books we need may not be available, or our place to study is inadequate. Do you find that most of your study time is wasted time? We may not be able to solve all of our study problems, but we all can find a quiet place to work - the library. Our library is set up for people to study in free from disturbances. If your study attempts at home are unsuccessful, why not try the library?

The library will be open for student study from 7 to 9:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday evenings. The librarians and staff members will be in charge of the reading room and will be available for reference aid.

Mr. Hartwick will be on duty Monday nights, Mr. Jeffries, Tuesday nights and Mr. Heimnick and Mr. Mayer on Wednesday and Thursday nights. The library is a place designed for study, it doesn't guarantee study success; that part is up to you. - Bob Lyngos.

Michigan's citizens are loyal boosters of their state.
