For all history buffs who missed it, last October 2nd was the Besser Museum's 5th annual Pioneer Harvest Day, which Michigan artisans from around the state practiced their age old crafts.

The crafts and demonstrations performed, depicted life during an earlier Northeastern Michigan era. Most of the demonstrations, which took place inside of the Museum, were as follows: corn shelling, leathercraft, soap making, wool spinning, rug making, quilting, candle dipping, china painting, horseshoeing, a flintlock rifle shooting, and old time business - such as 19th century life that was carried on in the old Maltz Bank.

It was all this and the help, from countless numbers of people that made the 5th annual Fall Harvest Day a memorable, interesting and enjoyable one for the 1500 to 2000 people that attended the "living" history of the past.
