Robert Jones

By Arthur Kniep

"It seems," disclosed Robert Jones, instructor of graphics arts at ACC, "that there was always a teacher in our family; my mother was a teacher and her mother before her."

Originally from the Detroit area, Jones started teaching at Lincoln High in a vocational program similar to his position today.

A soft-spoken, mild-mannered individual, Jones relates to his students with a great deal of enthusiasm stemming from his devoted interest in the printing field.

Jones spent last spring practicing for the Drummond Island Marathon. He paced himself for an eight-mile sprint and entered the race with expectant confidence. Participants in the race included both professionals and amateurs. Being a competitive runner, Jones felt his chances of finishing were good. Although he didn't win the race, Jones commented, "I didn't intend to win...I set my own goal to finish at my own pace, and I did."

"I've been teaching printing now for almost twenty years," said Jones, "I feel it's a fascinating subject. To me, it just seems to come natural."

Jones received his BA from Central Michigan University in 1957 and his MA from University of Michigan in 1963. Although his major was in industrial arts, he felt the printing field would be more challenging and its scope, broader. "I enjoy teaching because it helps others reach a goal..."

Jones spends each summer on Drummond Island with his family. He keeps busy either fishing, jogging or cutting wood for the fireplace.

He is always involved in some type of outdoor activity. During the school year he enjoys making maple syrup, a hobby combining physical effort and patience. Jones also enjoys cross-country skiing and jogging two miles each day.

STUDENT FEATURE

Paul Meyers

By Mary Kelley

Paul Meyers, president of ACC's Student Senate, and a scholastically active student, doesn't allow himself to remain idle for any length of time.

Living just outside the village of Posen with his parents, Meyers attended Posen High School and graduated in June, 1976. The following September he attended ACC.

Majoring in chemical engineering, Meyers is fascinated with physical science. This semester he's enrolled in Calculus III, university physics, statics, speech communications and is putting the finishing touches on a directed research project on the effects of PCB in fish.

Besides keeping himself busy with homework, Meyers is employed by ACC in the work-study program and by a gas station in Rogers City.

He also was assistant varsity football coach at Posen High School last fall. Now that that's through for the season, he's coaching the Posen Junior High basketball team. Meyers is also a member of the Men's Bowling Team in Rogers City, and participates in track and pool.

In the line of hobbies, he picks away at his guitar—playing his favorites, country and church music which he plays for St. Casimir Church in Posen. At one time he played for the ACC Collegiate Singers; but he can't seem to fit it into his schedule lately.

Next fall he plans to attend Michigan Technical University to continue his chemical engineering studies. He also anticipates playing football there.
