

For convenience (and credit), try a telecourse

You can take classes at ACC this spring through the flexible medium of television and with the convenience of having to come to campus only five times, after you register.

Flexibility and convenience, that's what telecourses are all about. PLS 221 Political Science and SOC 123 Sociology, both three-credit courses, are available.

Telecourses aren't for everyone, however. You have to be a motivated, self-directed learner in order to view the weekly broadcasts and complete reading and writing assignments without the structure of a weekly class setting.

If that sounds like you, a telecourse can be an appropriate alternative to the regular classroom setting. The programs reflect television at its best.

The telecourse title for PLS 221 Political Science is Government by Consent. Programs in this introductory American government course focus on the way every individual can affect the way we are governed. It attempts to combat the growing apathy and alienation among the American people by showing how individuals can make a difference in government.

Students will also use the textbook American Government and Politics Today, a telecourse study guide and Annual Edition American Government '91-'92.

Government by Consent uses interviews with political movers and shakers, mini-documentary segments and animation and graphics that vividly explain complex concepts and processes. Archival video and still photographs are used to illustrate key concepts and political events, contributing to the effectiveness of the telecourse.

For more information on the PLS 221 telecourse, contact instructor Wes Law (356-9021 Ext. 310).

The Sociological Imagination is the telecourse title for SOC 123 Sociology.

This is a visually-exciting, academically sound, and in-depth introduction to the multifaceted nature of sociological study.

Understanding sociological phenomenon is fundamental to each of us as we cope with the relationships in our lives and the complexity of life itself.

Each program in The Sociological Imagination is structured as a documentary, featuring interviews with people in their family settings, at work, school, church and play.

They are thought-provoking and emotionally strong illustrations of sociological issues and ideas such as socialization, social control, sex and gender, aging education, collective behavior and social change.

Expert commentary from leading sociologists provide a strong academic context to the issues examined. Students will also use the textbook, Sociology in a Changing World, and the telecourse study guide.

For more information on the SOC 123 telecourse, contact instructor Richard Clute (356-9021 Ext. 222).

You must register in person at the Alpena Campus or the Huron Shores Campus and attend six class meetings in Alpena during the semester.

The telecourse programs are broadcast each week on public broadcasting station WCML-TV Channel 6. You can watch the broadcasts, tape them for viewing at a more convenient time or view program tapes placed in area libraries for telecourse students.

Each program in The Sociological Imagination is structured as a documentary, featuring interviews with people in their family settings, at work, school, church and play. They are thought-provoking and emotionally strong illustrations of sociological issues and ideas such as socialization, social control, sex and gender, aging education, collective behavior and social change.

please

BE SEATED

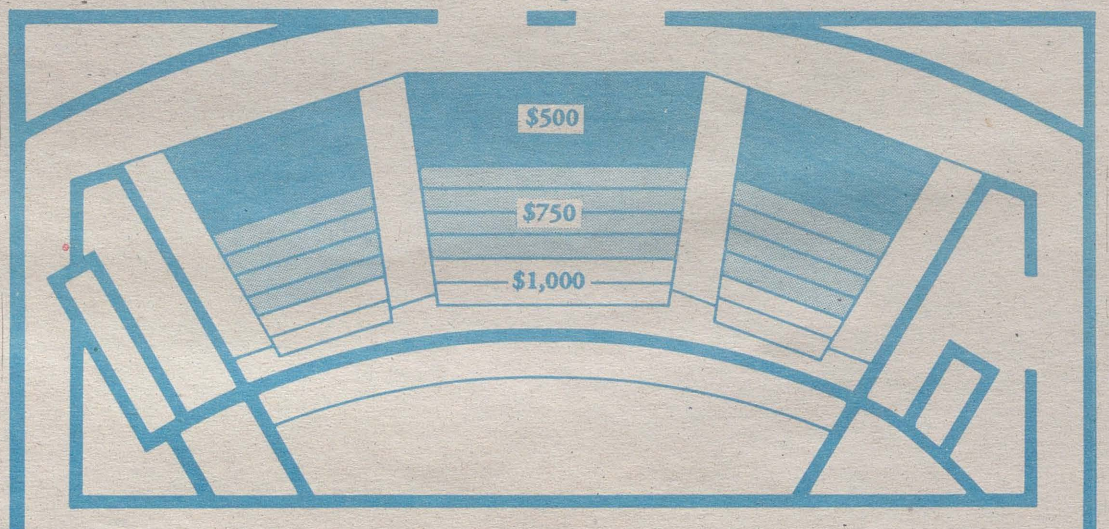

In ACC's New
Performance/Lecture Theatre
AND HELP US REACH OUR $1.5 MILLION GOAL

For a gift of $1,000, $750 or $500 you may BE SEATED in Alpena Community College's Performance/Lecture Theatre or designate a seat as a Memorial Gift. What a wonderful holiday remembrance... and a unique opportunity to be part of ACC's Building on Tradition Campaign.

The Theatre is part of the proposed $7 million Student/Community/Business/Learning Resources Center that will also include a new library, business and industry training areas, classrooms and office space, wellness/physical education labs and gymnasium, and student life and study areas.

When you donate a theatre seat, your gift will be recognized for all to see in the new facility. The amount of the gift determines the location of the seat in the Theatre.

Make checks payable to: Alpena Community College Foundation
Send to: 666 Johnson St. Alpena, MI 49707-1495

Please accept my gift of $ _____ to BE SEATED in ACC's Theatre.

Payable over _____ year (s) Entire amount now Payments of $ _____
1, 2, 3 years Annually Semi-annually Quarterly Monthly

This is a Memorial Gift:

In Honor of: _____

In Memory of: _____

Name _____

Address _____

Signature _____

Date _____

GOVERNMENT BY CONSENT

A NATIONAL PERSPECTIVE

Whether your consent is through direct participation or is consent through nonparticipation, this 26-lesson telecourse will help you understand the importance of the individual in our political process. For college-credit or personal enrichment Government By Consent is a TV series as timely as today's newscasts. You won't want to miss it!

Register for PLS 221 Section 4517
See Alpena Campus class listing for broadcast times and meeting dates