

POINTS OF INTEREST IN FREDERICTON, capital of New Brunswick, receive the Queen's attention. Her majesty's guide is Hon. Murray MacLaren, lieutenant-governor of the province

AFTER A 180-MILE TRIP by car through New Brunswick's unspoiled scenery, the King and Queen arrived, fresh and smiling, at Fredericton. Special trains brought Maritimers from near and far to see their majesties as the tour drew near its close

HATS HELD HIGH ALOFT on their poles, boy scouts at Halifax present an unusual sight as they bid the King and Queen "bon voyage"

CHARACTERISTIC of the King's last day in Canada is this picture, one of many warm "good-bys" to Canadians

ROUNDS OF FAREWELLS, and cries of "come again!" — all the way from Sherbrooke to the sea

Canada's smallest province made their majesties forget the weather with the enthusiasm of their welcome. Among the first groups to attract the royal eye were the war veterans, and at left, below, the Queen is shown chatting with amputation cases. From a balcony in Charlottetown (right, below) their majesties greet the crowds

QUEEN IS "TOAST OF NEW YORK"

THE KING AND QUEEN had a "preview" of the great welcome that awaited them in Washington and New York when the royal train paused briefly at Baltimore. The Queen received a bunch of "American Beauties"

THEIR MAJESTIES' CHARM made them literally "the toast of New York" when they visited the biggest city of the new world and toured the world's fair. Above they are seen shaking hands with well-wishers on the fair grounds

ROYALTY LITERALLY "stopped the show" at the fair, as gaily dressed workers came out to see them go by

Making Jam ?

HOMEY SUNDAY SCENE ON PRESIDENT'S FRONT PORCH

LIKE ANY FAMILY with Sunday visitors, President Roosevelt, his wife and mother sat on the front porch with their guests, the King and Queen, after attending church and before having a picnic lunch on the grounds of the president's home at Hyde Park, N.Y. Above is a close-up of the "porch sitters," and below, a general view. The four flags over the portico are the royal standard, the Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes and the president's flag. Left to right are: Mrs. Roosevelt, the King, Mrs. Sara Roosevelt, the Queen and President Roosevelt
