

the interests of my new country; my heart cherished the hope that it might identify itself with the sentiments of this people, yet always preserving the remembrance of its first affections, and never losing sight of the glory of France, nor of the sincere attachment which it has vowed to your Majesty; an attachment founded on a confraternity in arms, which so many great deeds have illustrated. It was with this hope that I arrived in Sweden; I found a nation in general attached to France; but still more so to their liberties and their laws; anxious for your friendship, Sire, but never desiring to obtain it at the expense of their honour and independence. Your Majesty's Minister wished to irritate this national feeling, and his arrogance has offended every one; his communications bore no character of those regards which are mutually due from crowned heads to each other. In fulfilling your Majesty's intentions, as it pleased his passions, Baron Alquier spoke like a Roman Pro-consul, without reflecting that he was not speaking to slaves. That Minister has, therefore, been the first cause of the distrust which Sweden has begun to shew with regard to your Majesty's intentions concerning her; subsequent events have added greater weight to it*. Sire! Humanity has already suffered too much. The blood of man has, for these twenty years past, inundated the earth; and there is nothing wanting to your Majesty's glory but to put a stop to it. If your Majesty thinks proper that the King should cause the Emperor Alexander to be informed of the possibility of a reconciliation, I augur sufficiently well, from the magnanimity of that Monarch, to dare assure you, that he will willingly agree to overtures that may be equally equitable for your Empire and for the North. If an event so unexpected, and so universally desired, could take place, how many nations of the Continent would not bless your Majesty! Their gratitude would be augmented by reason of the horror which inspires them against the return of a scourge which has laid so heavy on them, and the ravages which have left such cruel traces behind it. Sire, one of the most happy moments that I have enjoyed since quitting France, is that which has procured me the certainty of your Majesty's not having totally forgotten me. Your Majesty has judged rightly of my heart. You have appreciated how much it must be tormented by the melancholy prospective of seeing the interests of Sweden on the eve of being separated from those of France, or to sacrifice those of the country which has adopted me with a confidence without bounds. Sire, although a Swede by honour, by duty, and by religion, I still identify myself in my vows to that dear France which gave me birth, and which I have faithfully served from my infancy; every step that I take in Sweden, the homage which I receive here, recal to my mind those fine remembrances of glory which have been the principal cause of my elevation; and I can no longer hide it from myself, that Sweden, in nominating me, wished to pay this tribute of esteem to the French people."

The Swedish papers have also brought us an official extract of a Report from the Swedish Minister at Paris, Baron de Lagerbjelke, dated Oct. 26, 1810, addressed to the King of Sweden; and by his Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, made public at Stockholm, Jan 7, 1813. The substance of this paper is, to expose the inevitability of Buonaparte at the defection of Sweden from the Continental System. The Baron, in giving an account of an interview between him and Buonaparte, represents him as haranguing for an hour and a quarter against England; putting forth his menaces also against Sweden, for not having declared war against us; and scarcely giving the Swedish Ambassador an opportunity of uttering a syllable in defence of his Sovereign. The Corsican worked himself up to a pitch of indignation, which, the Ambassador says, exceeded all conception; and at the conclusion of his philippic abruptly withdrew, without listening to any reply. On the Ambassador's withdrawing from the apartment, he was surprised to find not an individual in the study-chamber; even the officers in waiting having gone away. "I know not," he says, "what had occasioned this extraordinary circumstance; whether it was the result of orders, or of the spontaneous discretion of the functionaries; for the Emperor had frequently elevated his voice with such vehemence, that it was impossible not to hear him in the adjoining apartment."

DENMARK.

The Danes, released by the retirement of the French troops from the beach in which they had been held, have manifested a hostile disposition to the French. It is positively stated, that in a disturbance which took place at Hamburgh on the 24th, in consequence of the Douaniers (Custom-house officers) having demanded the money from the Bank, in order to its removal; a detachment of Danish troops from Altona took an active part against the French, and were joined by their countrymen in that city. In this contest 30 Douaniers were killed. Troops had subsequently been ordered to hasten by forced marches from Zealand into the Duchy of Holstein, to form an army of observation, and protect it from the retreat ment of the French. At Altona the known partisans of the Enemy had been ordered to quit that city, and the public authorities had been displaced. The conscripts of which the French armies of observation were composed, were taking every opportunity to desert—scarcely a night passed in which from 50 to 60 did not cross the Elbe and retire into Holstein, where the farmers employed them in their husbandry.

Copenhagen, Feb. 27. After a bloody battle on the 18th, near Posen, 19,000 Russians entered Berlin on the 20th; 7000 have remained there, and the remainder continued their route.

FRANCE.

We have received from Paris the annual Exposé, which is the most meagre document ever imported from France. There is not a word about allies or plans of campaign, or projects of conquest; and the most perfect silence is preserved as to foreign relations. We are presented, instead, with a jumble of sheep-walks, the multiplication of cattle, rams of the Spanish breed, stallions, and other topics of a similar nature. The whole is of so little interest that we shall not give it room.

Marshal Ney has been created Prince of Moskwa, a Principality so called, into which the castle of Rivoli, and adjoining lands in Italy, have been for this purpose converted.

The Journal de Paris contains a brief summary of the life of Joel Barlow; at the conclusion of which the writer says, "Motives of high importance called him, in Oct. last, to Wilna; on his return from which city he was suddenly carried off by a defluxion on the lungs, at Zarnorice near Cracow."

HOLLAND.

The vessel Young Cornelis was frozen in the Zuyderzee, at the extremity of the isle of Vlieland, on the 16th Dec. in such a situation, that for 16 days she could not communicate with the shore. The crew devoured the dogs and cats on board, shoes, and every article made of leather; and were reduced to the necessity of prolonging existence by feeding upon the dead bodies of two of their companions.

AMERICA.

In some of the New York Federal Papers there are a series of articles written on the propriety of dissolving the Union, and separating the Eastern from the Southern States. The motives of the separation are, that the interests of the Eastern States are sacrificed to those of the Southern; that a majority of them are opposed to the present war, and of course are under the domination of their brethren.

A Bill, introduced on the recommendation of the Committee of Foreign relations, for the exclusion of foreign seamen from the public vessels and merchant-service of the United States, was passed in the House of Representatives. As its provisions are expected to remove the only remaining impediment to an adjustment with this country, it was strongly opposed by the war-party in all its stages. The state of the votes on the question for its passing was 89 yeas, and 53 nays. A Bill had been received from the Senate for vesting the power of retaliation in certain cases in the President. A motion was under the consideration of the House for laying on new taxes in support of the war.

An action took place on the 23th of November between Chippewa and Fort Erie. The first division of the Americans, under Brigadier A. Smith, landing at two o'clock in the morning, were most spiritedly resisted by Lieutenants King, Lamont, and Bartley; but owing to the great superiority of numbers, the two former of those officers were wounded and made prisoners. The fate of the day, however, soon changed when Lieut.-col. Bishop advanced from Chippewa, and Major Ormsby from Fort Erie. The British force was concentrated, and, by the superiority of its discipline and tactics, succeeded in compelling the invaders to a hasty retreat, with great loss. The British who had been taken in the early part of the day were exchanged shortly after the battle.

We have to announce another signal triumph of the British arms in Canada. On the 22d of January the American General Winchester attacked the British and Indian force, 2,100 strong, stationed on the River Raisin: an obstinate contest ensued, but victory at length declared in our favour; 600 of the American troops were made prisoners, including Gen. Winchester, and about the same number were killed and wounded. One account says, "The Americans were confused, and, after fighting three or four hours, the General surrendered." Another states, "that the American troops were overpowered, and 700 of them taken prisoners. Gen. Harrison reports, that Gen. Winchester, Col. Lewis, and a Brigadier-general, are among the prisoners." They add that the British loss was 60 men killed and wounded.

New York Papers have brought us the following disastrous intelligence: On the 29th of December H.M. frigate Java, Capt. H. Lambert, was captured by the United States frigate Constitution, Commodore Bainbridge, after a desperate action of an hour and 55 minutes, in which the Java lost 60 killed, and 101 wounded. Among the latter was the gallant Commander of the Java. The Americans lost nine killed and 25 wounded. The particulars it will be our duty hereafter to record in the Gazette Intelligence.

New York, Feb. 22. It is whispered that Mr. Baker, who has gone to the Chesapeake, to embark on board the packet, is the bearer of a proposition to Admiral Warren for an armistice.

New York, Feb. 23. Symptoms of insurrection have appeared among the negroes at Virginia.

IRELAND.

March 2. The important trial between the Hon. F. Cavendish and the Atlas and Globe Insurance Companies, terminated in the Court of Common Pleas, Dublin. It was an action to recover the sum of £16,500 from the defendants, who had insured the plaintiff's house and library, at Clontarf, to that amount; both of which were nearly destroyed by fire in July last. The defendants contended that the fire was not accidental: and the Jury found a verdict in their favour.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Feb. 25. A large portion of the cliff at East Dean lately gave way. The Rev. Mr. Gardner was viewing the prospect from Beachy Head at the time, when he perceived the ground move under his feet, and discovered at the same moment a considerable opening. He immediately quitted the spot, stepped over the chasm; and five minutes after, a part of the cliff fell with a tremendous noise on the beach below. The ruin is computed at 308,038 yards.

Feb. 28. A most destructive fire broke out at Little Waltham, Essex, last week. It began at a cottage, which took fire from the heating of an oven. This cottage stood directly opposite a farm called Felsteds, held off-hand by Mr. Thomas Beardwell; and in the short space of ten minutes, the stacks of corn and hay in the yards, the barn, stables, and other out-buildings, were in flames, the progress of which no human effort could arrest. The damage is supposed to exceed 4000*l*.

Feb. 28. Mr. Webb, who has been making a tour, and distributing large sums of money in different places, last week passed through Debenham, to Framlingham, where he gave away 400*l*. At Norwich he exercised similar liberality. He gave handsome suits to four country lads, and to one of them a watch of 5*l*. value. He gave a chimney-sweeper's boy a 5*l*. note, and Mr. Alexander, the banker, 100*l*. to bestow in charity. He entrusted also several clergymen with considerable sums for the same purpose. He left Ipswich for Colchester, which place he declared should have 600*l*. of his liberality. His donations in his peregrinations through Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex, amounted to 2500*l*.

Feb. 28. A lamentable case of parricide occurred within a few days, at Cherworth. A young man named Aiken, having returned home from an ale-house, and being reproved on account of his dissipation, by his father, impiously lifted his hand against his parent, and with one blow killed him on the spot.

March 1. About fifteen months ago, a prisoner in Porchester Castle composed some verses, and among the characters introduced in his poem, one very unfortunately struck the mind of a prisoner named Tardiff, as being expressly written to satirise himself. This erroneous idea invariably operated upon his mind, and he sought numerous opportunities to glut his vengeance on the person of Mr. Legue, from whom he imagined the writer of the lines had received the hints, enabling him to delineate the characteristics traits in question. After a lapse of thirteen months, on the 1st instant, Tardiff found the long-desired opportunity, rushed upon his victim with a clasp knife, and by repeated wounds murdered him. On another prisoner, at the risk of his own life, arresting his murderous arm in its progress, the villain calmly said, "I have now completed my work, and am content; you may take the weapon, and me too, wheresoever you think fit." While binding his arms, he requested those around to stand aside, in order that he might glut his sight with the view of his immolated victim. He has been removed to Winchester gaol to take his trial.

March 19. The trial of Mr. Kendal, charged with setting fire to Sidney Sussex College, (see p. 175) came on at the Cambridge Assizes. Before the Solicitor-general had finished the cross-examination of Paterson the watchman, such a scene of perjury was displayed, that Mr. Kendal was immediately acquitted.

March 21. This morning, about twenty minutes past six, the inhabitants of Exmouth were alarmed by the shock of an earthquake, which lasted for two or three seconds. The houses were shaken, the people hurried from their beds, and the utmost alarm prevailed for some time throughout the town. The shock was felt in like manner at Sidmouth, Budleigh, Salterton, Starcross, and for many miles along the coast, but we have not heard of any ill consequences from it.

March 22. The University of Cambridge was again thrown into considerable alarm, by a fire breaking out at Sidney College, between nine and ten in the evening. The flames were got under without much damage. This is the fourth fire that has lately happened at that College.

March 22. In the forenoon a fire broke out in a large factory, occupied by Messrs. Burnett, in Lever-street, Manchester, which destroyed destroyed the interior of the building, with the valuable machinery, &c.

March 24. This morning the candle-house of Messrs. Byron and Son, of Boston, was destroyed by fire, together with a quantity of tallow.

At the Essex Assizes, Mr. W. P. T. L. Wellesley was indicted for impeding the right of way through Wanstead Park, by first padlocking the gate, and afterwards ordering a trench to be dug across the road. The right of way was established by twenty-two witnesses, who proved that there had been a public road through the park as far back as the memory of the oldest person could reach. In defence, it was alleged, that the encroachment had been established by the want of resident owners, and a long minority; and that carts with offensive loading passed under the windows of the family mansion.

DOMESTIC OCCURRENCES.

The Gazette of Feb. 27, contains a notification from the Commissary in Chief's office, dated Feb. 6, that any officer of Commissariat who shall have lost a limb, or an eye, or totally lost the use of a limb, shall be entitled to a pension, commencing from the time when he was wounded, and depending in its amount on the rank he held, according to the scale annexed, the pension to be held with any other pay and allowance. The wounds for which pensions are granted must have been received since the commencement of hostilities in 1793; the pension will be proportioned to the rank he held at the time of being wounded, and will be paid from Dec. 25, 1811.—Commissary-general at the head of a Department, 350*l*.; Ditto, not at the head of a Department, 300*l*.; Deputy Commissary-general at the head of a Department, 300*l*.; Ditto, not at the head of a Department, 200*l*.; Assistant Commissary-general, 100*l*.; Deputy Assistant Commissary-general, 70*l*.; Commissariat Clerk, 40*l*.; Commissary-general of Accounts, 360*l*.; Deputy Commissary-general of ditto, 200*l*.; Assistant Commissary-general of ditto, 100*l*.; Deputy Assistant Commissary-general of ditto, 70*l*.; Commissariat Clerk, 40*l*.

"Windsor Castle, March 6.—His Majesty since the last report has been generally tranquil, but rather less so during the last week." Signed by M. Baillie, W. Heberden, J. Willis, H. Halford, R. Willis.

The stock upon his Majesty's farms in Windsor Great Park, has been sold by auction by order of the Trustees of his Majesty's private property.

A shocking accident happened at Lewis-lane during the late high wind. A stack of chimneys was blown down at the house of Mrs. Corbett, a seminary for young ladies; and one of the young ladies was killed on the spot. Others suffered severely by broken limbs and contusions.

A dreadful fire broke out lately in the gun-stock manufactory of Mr. Horner, in Red-lion-alley, Minories; which was destroyed. The flames soon afterwards caught the manufactories of Mr. Davis, gun-smith, and Mr. Furniss, carpenter, and levelled them to the ground in a short time. A second conflagration broke out in the adjoining houses, which was not subdued until six houses (chiefly of wood) had been destroyed.

The Lord Chancellor has finally decided in the cause Wilkinson v. Adams and others, trustees, against the appellant. By this decision nearly a million sterling in estates is confirmed to three illegitimate children of the late Mr. Wilkinson, iron-master, in exclusion of his nephew, who had been brought up as his heir, resided with him, and managed his business upwards of thirty years, without any salary.—Mr. W. became acquainted with the mother of the children in one of his visits to London, where she acted as a servant, and after he had attained his 70th year. This decision settles the question, which has lately been contested, that illegitimate children can succeed to estates by will.

A society has recently been formed in the Metropolis, called "The Irish Charitable Society for the relief of Natives of Ireland reduced to distress, or desirous of returning to their native country to settle, without pecuniary means of conveying them thither."

The Directors of the British Institution have declared Mr. Bird's picture of The Death of Eli entitled to the first premium of the present year, being 300 guineas: the second premium of 200 guineas has been awarded to Mr. Halls, for his picture of The raising of Jairus's Daughter.

The quantity of tea consumed in these kingdoms is astonishing. Every three months, the East India Company put up six millions of pounds weight for sale, or 24,000,000 lbs. per annum.

A new silver coinage of nine-penny pieces, is said to have been ordered by Government.

Saturday, March 27.

The Monument erected by the Corporation of London to the memory of Mr. PITT, was opened to public view. It is placed on the South side of Guildhall, exactly facing that of his father, the late great Earl of Chatham. Mr. Canning, accompanied by Lord G. L. Gower, attended the Corporation Committee; and after viewing it, expressed his satisfaction with the design and the execution of it.

The massy substance on which the figures in this composition are placed, is intended to represent the Island of Great Britain and the surrounding Waves. On an elevation in the centre of the Island, Mr. Pitt appears in his robes, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the attitude of a public Orator. Below him, on an intermediate fore-ground, two Statues characterize his abilities; while, with the national Energy, which is embodied, and riding on a symbol of the ocean in the lower centre, they assist to describe allusively the effects of his administration. Apollo stands on his right, impersonating Eloquence and Learning. Mercury is introduced on his left, as the representative of Commerce and the patron of Policy. To describe the unprecedented splendour of success which crowned the British Navy, while Mr. Pitt was Minister, the lower part of the Monument is occupied by a statue of Britannia, seated triumphantly on a sea-horse; in her left hand is the usual emblem of Naval Power; and her right grasps a thunder-bolt, which she is prepared to hurl at the enemies of her Country.

The Inscription, written by Mr. Canning, is clear and nervous: and avoids, more perhaps than could have been expected from the Right Hon. Author, any very pointed allusions to those matters of policy on which such contrariety of opinion is still held.

WILLIAM PITT

Son of WILLIAM PITT Earl of Chatham,

Inheriting the genius, and formed by the precepts of his Father,
Devoted himself from his early years to the service of the State.

Called to the chief conduct of the Administration, after the close of a disastrous war,
He repaired the exhausted Revenues, he revived and invigorated
the Commerce and Prosperity of the Country;

And he had re-established the Publick Credit on deep and sure foundations:

When a new War was kindled in EUROPE, more formidable than any preceding War from the peculiar character of its dangers.

To resist the arms of FRANCE, which were directed against the Independence of every Government and People,

To animate other Nations by the example of GREAT BRITAIN,

To check the contagion of opinions which tended to dissolve the frame of Civil Society,

To array the loyal the sober-minded and the good in defence of the venerable Constitution of the BRITISH MONARCHY,

Were the duties which, at that awful crisis, devolved upon the British Minister,

And which he discharged with transcendent zeal intrepidity and perseverance:

He upheld the National Honour abroad;

he maintained at home the blessings of Order and of true Liberty;

And, in the midst of difficulties and perils,

He united and consolidated the strength power and resources of the Empire.

For these high purposes,

He was gifted by DIVINE PROVIDENCE with endowments,

Rare in their separate excellence; wonderful in their combination:

Judgment; imagination; memory; wit; force and acuteness of reasoning;

Eloquence, copious and accurate, commanding and persuasive,

And suited from its splendour to the dignity of his mind and to the authority of his station;

A lofty spirit; a mild and ingenuous temper.

Warm and steadfast in friendship, towards enemies he was forbearing and forgiving.

His industry was not relaxed by confidence in his great abilities.

His indulgence to others was not abated by the consciousness of his own superiority.

His ambition was pure from all selfish motives:

The love of power and the passion for fame were in him subordinate to views of publick utility;

Dispensing for near twenty years the favours of the Crown,

He lived without ostentation; and he died poor.

A GRATEFUL NATION

Decreed to him those funeral honours

Which are reserved for eminent and extraordinary men.

THIS MONUMENT

Is erected by the LORD MAYOR, ALDERMEN, and COMMON COUNCIL,

To record the reverent and affectionate regret

With which the CITY OF LONDON cherishes his memory;

And to hold out to the imitation of Posterity

Those principles of publick and private virtue,

Which ensure to Nations a solid greatness,

And to individuals an imperishable name.

MEMOIRS OF THE LATE EDWARD JERNINGHAM, Esq.

THE late Edward Jerningham, esq. (see our last Volume, Part ii. p. 501. b.) descended from an ancient family in Norfolk, was the youngest brother of the late Sir William Jerningham, bart. He was educated in the English College at Douay, and from thence removed to Paris, where he improved himself in classical attainments till he had nearly reached his twenty-first year. He was a good Latin scholar, and was tolerably well acquainted with the Greek. The French and Italian languages, but particularly the former, were nearly as familiar to him as that of his native country. In his mind, benevolence and poetry had always a mingled operation. His taste was founded upon the best models of Literature. The first production which raised him into public notice, was a poem in commendation of the Magdalen Hospital; and Mr. Jonas Hanway, one of its most active patrons, often declared, that its success was very much promoted by this poem. He continued occasionally to afford proofs of his poetical genius, and his works passed through many editions. They are uniformly marked by taste, elegance, and a pensive character, that always excites tender and pleasing emotions. In some of his works, however, as in "The Shakspeare Gallery," "Enthusiasm," and "The Rise and Fall of Scandinavian Poetry," he displays great vigour, and even sublimity. The first of these poems had an elegant and spirited compliment from Mr. Burke, in the following passage:—"I have not for a long time seen any thing so well-finished. He has caught new fire by approaching in his perihelium so near to the Sun of our poetical system."—His last work, published a few months ago, and which has reached a second edition, was entitled "The Old Bard's Farewell." It is not unworthy of his best days, and breathes an air of benevolence and grateful piety for the lot in life which Providence had assigned him, highly honourable to his heart, as well as to his talents.—In his later writings he endeavoured to represent the Christian doctrine in its most attractive form, divested of the terrors with which it is viewed by the timid believer. "The Essay on the mild Tenour of Christianity" traces historically the efforts to give an Anchorite-cast to the Christian profession, and abounds in interesting anecdotes derived from the page of Ecclesiastical History. "The Essay on the Eloquence of the Pulpit in England," (prefixed to Bishop Bossuet's Select Sermons and Orations) was very favourably received by the public. "The presuming to canvass a subject (says the Author) with which I am not professionally connected, is sanctioned by the authority of the judicious Jortin; who says, 'the subject might be treated to more advantage by those who are not personally concerned in it.'"—Mr. Jerningham had, during the course of a long life, enjoyed an intimacy with the most eminent literary characters in the higher ranks, particularly the celebrated Earl of Chesterfield, and the present Earl of Carlisle.—His illness had continued for some months, and was at times very severe; but his sufferings were much alleviated by a course of theological study he had imposed on himself, and which he considered most congenial to a closing life. He has bequeathed all his manuscripts to Mr. Clarke, New Bond-street.—Mr. Jerningham's productions are as follow: 1. "Poems and Plays," 4 vols. 9th edition, 1806. 2. "Select Sermons and Funeral Orations, translated from the French of Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux," third edition, 1801. 3. "The Mild Tenour of Christianity, an Essay, (elucidated from Scripture and History; containing a new illustration of the characters of several eminent personages)," second edition, 1807. 4. "The Dignity of Human Nature, an Essay," 1805. 5. "The Alexandrian School; or, a Narrative of the first Christian Professors in Alexandria," third edition, 1810. 6. "The Old Bard's Farewell," a Poem, second edition, with additional passages, 1812.

HENRY REDHEAD YORKE, Esq.

This accomplished scholar died at his residence in Chelsea, on the 28th of January, in the 41st year of his age, after an illness of some months continuance; (see p. 168.) He had been recently called to the Bar, a profession for which he was highly qualified, and in which there was every reason to hope he would have risen to high eminence had his life been prolonged. Indeed, the zeal with which he devoted himself to his various professional pursuits hastened, if it did not bring on, the disorder which put a period to his existence. As a classical scholar and nervous elegant writer, he has left few equals. His letters under the signature of "Galgacus" first printed in The Star, have not been surpassed by any political popular writings since the days of Junius; with this difference, that their aim and tendency was to rouse and unite the energies of a powerful people in defence of their common Country, while those of the latter were calculated to divide, repress, and sacrifice them to the passions of party.—In private life Mr. Yorke was distinguished for a benevolence and liberality of sentiment, and openness of character, which fall to the lot of few; and his company was courted by men of all parties.—An account of the life of Mr. Yorke, which was a busy one and much chequered, could not fail to hold up many useful lessons, particularly to young men of ardent minds. Carried away with youthful fervour, he was, in his younger days, a great admirer of the French Revolution; or, as he himself used to express it, “madly in love with ideal Liberty.” He was an officer in the French army, a member (if we rightly recollect) of the National Convention, and personally acquainted with all the leading characters in the Revolution. He was denounced by Robespierre; and, but for a friendly hint from the celebrated Condorcet, must have been guillotined had he been one hour longer in making his escape.—The scenes through which he passed, the enormities he witnessed, the abuse and perversion of all principle which characterised almost all the demagogues of the Revolution, left a strong and salutary effect on the mind of Mr. Yorke, cured him completely of all his Utopian ideas, and made him highly value the only practical illustration of true Liberty which has yet been exhibited among the political institutions of men—the British Constitution. Mr. Yorke has left a widow and four children. His manuscripts ought to be revised for publication, for their benefit, and the instruction of the publick. See our present Month’s Review, p. 250.

DEATHS.

1811, AT Brussels, aged 71, Bertrand May ... Cahuac, Professor of Civil Law in the Ecole de Droit at that place. He was born of French parents, in the neighbourhood of London, in 1741.

1812, March ... Sir Edward Michael Ryan, Lieut.-col. of the 78th regiment, on board a small country ship, The Virginia, on his return from Batavia, on finding Sir Samuel Auchmuty, for whom he had dispatches, had returned to India—he sailed from Madras immediately on landing from Europe, for Java; and thus anxious zeal, operating with the fatigue of a long voyage, has deprived the service of a distinguished officer, who received the Imperial military order of Maria Theresa for a most important action, as is thus related: “The undersigned certifies to Capt. Ryan, of the English Light-dragoons, that on the 24th of April, 1794, the 15th regiment charged the Enemy, who were in great force at Villers en Couché, routed them, sabred a great many, and, by this conduct, rescued his Imperial Majesty from the danger that menaced his person, who, being on the road from Valenciennes to Catillon, was cut off by the patrols of the Enemy, as his Majesty on that day was returning from Brussels to the army, and the Enemy’s patrols were already passed over the River Selle. Capt. Ryan, who so distinguished himself in this affair, had his horse wounded, as well as the Officers who are specified by Field Marshal Lieut. Otto, under whose particular command the regiment was. MAXM. COMTE DE MARELOT, Major General. Vienne, Dec. 20, 1797.”—Not contented with preventing the melancholy consequence above stated, this regiment took three pieces of cannon. Much more is stated by Comte Marelvet; but the communicator of this article fears to trespass too much on Mr. Urban, though with some excuse, as referring to an historical fact.

May ... At Pondicherry, Lieut. Facio, of the East India Company’s service. Being one of a party of officers in a catamaran, which was upset, his leg was seized by a shark, and so dreadfully lacerated, that he died on being brought on the beach.

Oct. ... At Dominica, Thos. Beech, esq. surgeon, formerly of Bracknall, Berks.

Dec. ... In the Island of Antigua, Lieut. Thos. C. Scotland, R. N. son of Thomas S. esq. of that Island.

Jan. 17. Struck in the breast by a musket-ball, in the retreat near the river Huerta, in his 24th year, Capt. Henry Dawson, 52d foot, fourth son of Pudsey D. esq. of Liverpool. His fall has renewed in his family those griefs which had scarcely subsided for the loss of another son, Capt. Wm. D. of the Piedmontaise, who lately died in the East Indies.

Jan. 19. At Kensington, the wife of John Vickris Taylor, esq. of Southgate, Middlesex.

Aged 59, Mrs. Hamer, widow of the late Geo. H. esq. of Rochdale, Lancashire. At Grantham, in his 89th year, Rev. Robert Heron, third son of Robert Heron, sometime town-clerk, and afterwards recorder of Newark, in Nottinghamshire. This last mentioned Robert had four sons and two daughters. Of the former, John, the eldest, was recorder of Newark, and died in early life. Thomas, the second son, was also recorder of the same place; and having married to his first wife the daughter of Sir Edward Wilmot, knight physician, continued to reside there till after her decease. He purchased the ancient castle of Chilham in Kent, whither he removed late in life, and married to his second wife, one of the Sawbridges of the last-mentioned county, who survives him. The only surviving son of Thomas Heron is the present Sir Robert Heron, of Stabten in Lincolnshire, who inherits the baronetcy from the late Sir Richard Heron, of whom hereafter. The third son of Robert Heron, recorder of Newark, was the subject of this memoir. He married in early life a Miss Vachel, by whom he had no issue, and whom he survived many years. The fourth and last son of the aforesaid Robert, was Richard Heron, a solicitor of consideration, who went to Ireland with the late Earl of Buckinghamshire, in the capacity of Secretary, when his Lordship went a Lord Lieutenant. While he filled this office, the dignity of a Baronet was conferred upon him; in which, as has been before observed, he is succeeded by his nephew, the present Sir Robert, M. P. for the borough of Grimsby. The antiquity of this family may be traced to a very remote period, as lords of the manor of Chipchase, in the county of Northumberland; and in some of its branches it was more than once ennobled. They appear, however, to have fallen into a state of comparative obscurity for some reigns previous to that of Charles I.; when one of them, who held a commission under that monarch, settled in Newark, where his descendants acquired considerable property. From a connection by marriage with a family of the name of Crayle, and under the will of a lady belonging to it, Thomas, the father of the present Sir Robert, and in succession Robert, the subject of this article, became possessed of a life-interest in 100,000*l.* in the Three per Cents. The old lady intended to have left it in perpetuity to the children of Thomas, by name; but, finding herself in extremes before their baptismal appellations were transmitted to her, she bequeathed the remainder, after the decease of Thomas, Robert, and Richard, to Saint George's Hospital in this Metropolis. Richard did not live to enjoy it, but Thomas and Robert received the interest of it successively for a great number of years; and the latter (as he has lived in great privacy for some time, partly from his age, and some partial infirmities not admitting of much society, and partly from that inclination to accumulate, which great riches suddenly acquired has a general tendency to produce) is supposed to have amassed great wealth, the principal part of which he has bequeathed to the present Baronet. In the younger part of his life, he was a man of social habits, good temper, and easy manners; with a considerable fund of anecdote, a retentive memory, and a happy knack at portraying characters. He was not without singularities, which grew upon him in the latter part of his life; of which, not the least extraordinary was a whimsical mixture of liberality and economy. It is but fair, however, to say of him, that the latter was principally exercised on himself, while the former was experienced by some of those to whom it was extremely acceptable.

At Levensgrove, near Stokesley, co. York, aged 92, Mr. T. Noddin, yeoman; who lived on a farm more than half a century, now the property of Lady Amherst. Her remains were interred in the North aisle of Ratby

Ratby church, in the same vault with her great-grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Choyce, who died May 5, 1704, aged 105. A Funeral Sermon was preached there, Jan. 13, 1813, by the Rev. Mr. Martin, from Rev. xiv. 13; and on Feb. 17, another at Thornton, by the Rev. Mr. Wood, from Amos iv. 12; and the following inscription is intended to be put on her monument: "She was a meek woman, a tender mother, a dutiful wife, always ready to relieve a neighbour in want, and deeply lamented by her only surviving son William Buckley."—The above-mentioned Margaret Choyce, who resided at Whittington Grange, lived in three centuries. He was a staunch Whig, and the firm and tried friend of his old and valued friend Filmer Honywood, and one of his best inspectors in his various contests for the County; and particularly at the election for the year 1790, when that good and honourable man was deprived, by a train of unforeseen events, of the co-operation and assistance of his respectable colleague the Hon. C. Marsham, and when he was singly opposed to a coalition, between the professed friends of one candidate, and the avowed enemies to the principles of both, to the clamours of bigotry and superstition, excited by the recent attempt to repeal the Test Act, and to the influence of Government, at all times, from local circumstances very extensive, and increased, at that particular juncture, by the support of the India Company, the personal popularity of the Minister, and the sudden and vigorous preparation for a foreign war. By his death his family, his amiable wife, a son, and three daughters, have to deplore the loss of one of the best of husbands and of fathers; the poor in the neighbourhood in which he resided the kindest friend; and in his departure from this world, he carried with him the regret and esteem of all who had the happiness of knowing him, for he was social, hospitable, and generous.

In the various relations of life, social, domestic, and religious, truth itself most accord Mrs. H. as most exemplary; a faithful wife, an affectionate mother, a warm friend, and a good Christian. She passed her long-protracted life with an approving conscience, and she met her long-approaching death with the calmness of faith. She was gifted by Providence with an expansion of mind and vigour of intellect, and with a celerity of apprehension and soundness of judgment, rare in themselves, and still more rare in their combination. And these talents were not overlooked they were judiciously cultivated and successfully improved under the fostering care of an indulgent father, a Clergyman of the most primitive simplicity of manners and an apostolical sanctity of life; who, on an income of 100*l.* a year, brought up a family of nine children in a style of credit and respectability, that would not disparage the most favoured of the sons of opulence. "Tempora mutantur, et nos mutamur in illis." In her early days Mrs. H. exhibited several specimens of poetic genius, which would do no discredit to the most refined taste and the most admired votary of the Muses. She was honoured with the friendship and correspondence of some of the brightest Cambrian geniuses of their day; and, among others, the writer of this sketch cannot forbear naming that darling of his country, Helicon Lloyd, the sweet Lyrist of Merioneth. Some of their letters in prose and verse are still preserved, which truly display (what Mr. L. on another occasion styles) "the magic powers of the pen." A still more prominent trait in this character, was the versatility and fascination of her colloquial powers, which united a more than ordinary knowledge of human nature, and a mode of expression at once animated, perspicuous, and easy. Indeed, long after she "declined into the vale of years," the cheerfulness of her conversation and the elasticity of her spirits rendered her the life and entertainment of every society, and, from some of her admiring friends, procured her the quaint, but appropriate, appellation of Sal volatile. Her conversation, indeed, afforded a new living testimony (if it were wanting) that true Christian piety and hilarity of demeanour are not so inaccessible to each other as some modern enthusiasts seem to imagine. But what stamped a dignity and grace upon her other endowments were the transcendent virtues of her heart; and if the former endeared her to mortals, the latter endeared her to one that is immortal. Her love to the Creator was equalled only by her benevolence to his creatures. Affliction, under any form had always access to the door and to the heart of this good Samaritan, as the poor, the sick, and the naked, within the recent sphere of her charity, can well, and now too bitterly, attest. However drained the main springs of her philanthropy must have been by the premature loss of a beloved husband, still the last forty years of her life seem destined to shew, how much essential good can be effected by a moderate income, when zeal, judgment, and economy, become the dispensers of it. She left four children, to inherit her reputation, and to emulate her virtues. Peace to her manes!

Aged 80, Mrs. Sparke, widow of Wm. Esq. late major of the 48th regiment, and mother of the Bishop of Ely.

She bore the very long and painful illness which terminated her existence, with the most Christian fortitude, patience, and resignation; and quitted this transitory scene with a hope full of immortality. To mental powers of the first order she added all those useful and ornamental acquisitions, sitions, which dignify the female character, and render it capable of commanding at once admiration and esteem. To the unhappy partner, whom she has left behind, her loss will be irreparable; as she adorned the station wherein Providence had been pleased to place her, by the regular, uniform, and cheerful discharge of all the duties which appertained to it. Hence she passed respected through life, and is followed in death by the sincere regret of all who knew her. Her remains were interred on Thursday the 18th in a spacious family vault, in the church-yard of Keel, a village about two miles and a half distant from Newcastle-under-Line. She has left an only son, to deplore with his unhappy parent their mutual and irretrievable loss.

He went, Feb. 5, with Mrs. R. to the grand gala or fête of the Prince Regent at Carlton House, and, during the entertainment, the heat being oppressive to Mrs. R. he raised one of the windows, and the exposure to the cold air produced a constitutional affection, which terminated in a typhus fever, and in the death of this excellent and useful man. No professional character could be more respected by the superior members of the faculty in the Metropolis; nor could any individual be more beloved.

In Charles-street, in his 74th year, Mr. Joseph Nattali.

She was sister to the late Earl of Cardigan, mother to the Dowager Lady Sidney, and grandmother to the Duchess of Buccleugh, Lord Selby, Countess of Chatham, and Lady Dineror.

In Fetter-lane, in his 81st year, Mr. John Stephens, better known by the name of Doctor Stephens, who was perhaps the most eminent Chiropractist of this or any former age. He was a native of Chipstaple in Somersetshire, a younger son of a carpenter, who was a man of some little consequence in his neighbourhood; but, having a large family, his son John determined, at the age of 19, to come to London, and try his fortune. Here luckily he was engaged as an humble assistant to the labours of Mr. Crane, the very eminent Surgeon in Salisbury Court, whom he frequently attended at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he was much respected by the medical gentlemen in general, many of whom continued their friendship through life. At that period he acquired a considerable degree of knowledge in the anatomy of the Human Foot, which led him afterwards to the occupation in which he made so conspicuous a figure. His next employ was in the service of a gentleman with whom he travelled over a considerable part of the kingdom; and for some time he was a Domestic in the respectable family of the Hoods, of Bardon Hall in Leicestershire. In the Mayoralty of George Nelson, esq. in 1765. and again in that of Sir Robert Kite, esq. in 1766. Mr. Stephens wore laced cloaths, and fed on custard, and occasionally on turtle and venison, at the Mansion-house. This led him to the appointment of messenger at the Magdalen Hospital, which he relinquished for that of Collector of the Street-Toll for the City of London at Temple Bar; to which he united the practice of that profession in which he so much excelled. In all these different capacities, a blunt honesty and strict integrity were his predominant character. He was a steady friend, a loyal subject, and a devout Christian. Few persons were more universally known in the Metropolis: a tall stout man, nearly six feet high; and uniformly dressed in a blue coat, a scarlet waistcoat with a narrow gold lace, and a white hat; and always with a nosegay in his button-hole. A portrait of him, a small oval, engraved by Hawkins, from a painting by J. Bowring, was published in 1791. A better likeness, however, a painting by Kearsley, is in the possession of Bryant Crowther, esq. the celebrated Surgeon. He lived temperately, smoked his pipe at home, went to bed early, rose with the lark, and, with the exception of a slight asthma, enjoyed a robust state of health to the last. His loss will be felt by the feet of many of the most considerable inhabitants of the Cities of London and Westminster; but he had fortunately trained to the profession the daughter of one of his sisters.

Feb. 22. At Bath, aged 63, Richard Ramsbottom, esq. M. P. for Windsor, 1807; more than 40 years a Liveryman of the Company of Stationers, but better known by his famous Windsor Ale.

Feb. 25. At Somers Town aged 83, James Parkinson, esq. the late proprietor of Sir Ashton Lever's museum, formerly exhibited in Leicester House, and disposed of by lottery, under sanction of Parliament, in 1784. Mr. P. had 2 tickets, one of which he had given away, and by the other became entitled to the prize of this noble collection of Nature and Art. He was born at Shrewsbury, of parents who settled in Ireland in the time of Charles I. and was bred to the business of a law-stationer. By indefatigable industry, and the strictest integrity, he became Agent and Receiver to many families of consequence, by whom he was much respected and confided in for his ability and correctness; and among similar services had the good fortune to extricate the affairs of the late Sir Thomas Robinson, bart. from great confusion and embarrassment, to the satisfaction of all parties concerned; cerned; for which he received a considerable present beyond what he had for his trouble. He was likewise employed by many noblemen and gentlemen in the management and receipt of their estates; and, being an excellent accountant, with the clearest head, was frequently of great use in arranging their concerns, or settling any intricacies or disputes which had arisen. The writer of this had known and employed him above 40 years, and can bear ample testimony to his fidelity and accuracy. Having obtained the prize in the above lottery, he made several attempts to dispose of it for less than one half of what was considered to be its real value, and was long tantalized with expectations from agents of the Queen of Portugal, and from the late Empress of Russia; the latter of whom seemed very desirous of it; but her journey to the South of her dominions interrupted the negotiation, and it was not afterwards renewed. This being the case, Mr. P. was advised to take it into his own hands; and as the rent of Leicester house was enormous, he was induced to buy a small piece of ground on the Surrey side of Blackfriars-bridge, for the purpose of exhibiting it. This was effected, and it was opened in 1788 or 1789. In the mean time he had taken great pains to study the various branches of Natural History, in which he not only succeeded to a wonderful degree, to the great surprize of his friends, but enriched the collection with many additional and valuable specimens both of Nature and Art, which were mostly disposed of by public auction in 1806; and though from his singular modesty the price of admission was too low, yet he was never heard to utter a complaint, that his success was not so great as his friends thought him deserving of. Mr. P. left one daughter and two sons, to whom he gave a good education, and brought up to more useful occupations than he had been tempted, and almost obliged to embrace, when he deviated from his first profession. Never was there a better father, or more deserving man.

Feb. ... In High-street, Marylebone, at the advanced age of 107, Mons. Bertrand D. de Lille, who had served Louis XV. 40 years as first valet-de-chambre. After the death of that Monarch, he lived on a small property near Paris, which being at last exhausted, and his pension taken away, he emigrated, and partook of the charity of this country destined to French Emigrants; whilst his acute faculties and a considerable portion of bodily health were preserved to him till within a few weeks of his death.

Lately, After 48 hours great suffering, in consequence of falling into a pit or hole left by the pavions in Red Lion-street, Holborn, aged 63, Mr. C. Thorn, of Liverpoel.

Respected and regretted by an extensive circle of friends, Mr. Stephen Finlaid, of the Hole in the Wall, Fleet-street. His habits of conviviality, so frequently connected with his calling, in all probability laid the foundation of a long illness; which, together with the unexpected death of a beloved daughter, the protracted sufferings of a promising son, and other serious domestic griefs, proved at last too weighty for life to sustain. He has left a widow and three children to lament him; the elder, an amiable young lady, he had the satisfaction to see happily wedded a short time before his death.

At Westminster, aged 25, Mr. Richard Herring. A case more calculated to excite sympathy for the widow, or a sigh for the departed, seldom occurs in our annals of the dead: having been but recently united to a discreet and agreeable young female, whose trial of affection was immediately put severely on her, by a disease which mocked all her tenderest care, defied the most salubrious air of different counties, and the skill of experienced physicians: leaving after seven months suffering, a pregnant widow to lament the severity of her fate. He had made arrangements for conducting a considerable trade as a manufacturer of wax and tallow, the process of which he had much shortened by an ingenious method of melting by steam. Even with declining strength the sanguine expectations of youth never forsook him. In listening to his frequent and latest remarks, the writer of this article could never forget the beautiful line of Pope:

"Hope travels through, nor quits us when we die."

J. M. P.

In the Charter-house, aged 83, Mr. Geo. Folingsby, formerly a shoemaker in Inner Temple-lane, for nearly half a century. He was supposed to have had more Lawyers than any man in England. He was a native of the King's County. He married Margaret, the widow of Mr. Withers, formerly a bookseller near Temple Bar; a business which she carried on (as a separate Trader) till her death.

March 1. At his house at Dover, where he had resided more than 30 years, in the 88th year of his age, the Rev. Alexander James, B. D. formerly of Christ Church college, Cambridge, rector of Little Campfield in Essex, vicar of Buckland near Dover, and of St. Margaret's at Cliff. He had long used himself to a regular and rather abstemious mode of living, seldom partaking of more than one thing at dinner, and that generally of the plainest food at the table. A long series of good health was the reward of his moderation, for he had enjoyed an uninterrupted state of health during the greatest part of his life. He was a man of considerable learning, and well versed in the Greek language. Post of society, he was seldom without visitors, who always found a hearty welcome under his hospitable roof. He had set hours for study, and the other occupations in which his mind was engaged, and the afternoon was generally appropriated to company and the conversation of his friends. He had enjoyed the living of Campfield more than 30 years, during which time he had not increased the tithes of the parish, but left them at his death, as he had at first received them, although their value had increased more than in a threefold ratio. He was very regular in the performance of his duty at Buckland (about a mile and a half from his residence), and did duty there on the last Sunday but one before his decease: he generally walked there and back, and the last time he officiated he walked there as usual, and, having married two couple, returned home to his dinner, after which he walked again to Buckland, and performed the burial service at three funerals, during which time the weather having changed, and become cold and rainy, by the time he arrived at home he was attacked with a shivering fit to so great a degree that he was unable to stand, and said to his confidential servant who always attended on him, that he should not long survive the service of that day. This proved true, for about that day week, which was the 1st of March, he departed this life; and having desired in his life-time, that when his decease should take place his body might not be committed to the ground until signs of a change had taken place, he was in consequence of this request not interred until the 11th instant. Educated a Minister of the Church of England, he was a strict observer of its rules and discipline; but, as an universal philanthropist, he blamed not others for worshipping the Deity according to the dictates of their consciences, if conformable to the rules of the Gospel. During a long life he had formed numerous and respectable acquaintances, many of whom he might number in his list of friends. His remains were attended to the place of interment in his parish of Buckland by some of his nearest relatives, and by many of the inhabitants of the village, who, with the sincerest sorrow, mourned the loss of their respected minister. His friend, the Rev. Charles Philpott, of Ripple, performed the last sad office of committing to the grave the remains of this worthy man. S. S.

March 2. At his House in Stanhope-st. May Fair, in the 88th year of his age, the Right Hon. Thomas Dawson, Viscount and Baron Cremorne, Baron Dartrey, of Dawson-Grove, in the County of Monaghan, Ireland; and for many years one of the Representatives for that County in the Irish House of Commons. His Lordship married, in 1754, the Lady Anne Fermor, youngest daughter of Thomas, first Earl of Pomfret. By her, who died in 1769, he had a son and a daughter; the former of whom died in 1778*, the latter in 1767. He married, secondly, Miss Freame, only daughter of Thomas Freame, esq. by his wife Margaretta, the daughter of the Hon. William Penn, Founder and Lord Proprietary of the Province of Pennsylvania; by whom he had a son and a daughter, both of whom died in 1787. This most excellent man, during a life much extended beyond the common privilege of years, fulfilled all the great duties which honours and an ample fortune impose, in a manner to command, not only the highest esteem, but the most tender love, of all who had the happiness to be connected with him, either by the ties of kindred, of friendship, or of service. His generosity was unbounded, and his heart in the most comprehensive sense charitable; which the order and regularity of his affairs enabled him always to indulge. His manners were engaging to all; his disposition courteous and hospitable: He was a most tender husband; an affectionate father, so long as it pleased God to permit him that relation; a warm and faithful friend; a kind and fostering master; a just and protecting landlord; and a liberal encourager of arts and industry. In his public duties, he was loyally affected towards his Sovereign, an exemplary citizen, and zealously attached to his own native country, Ireland. But his most exalted character is, that he was a true Christian in mind and practice; resigned to the Divine Will, under the severe and peculiar domestic losses by which it pleased God to make trial of his virtues; and that he died in humble, yet strong, reliance on the mercies of God, through the atonement of Jesus Christ.

March 5. At Malling, near Lewes, in her 79th year, the Rt. Hon. Anne Countess Dowager of Chichester, relict of the late Thomas Earl of Chichester. Perhaps there has not been an instance of a more perfectly amiable character so many years most respectfully maintained in the several relations of life: the dignity of her rank was preserved with the most endearing complacency, mildness, and benevolence to all. She appeared remarkably cheerful the day preceding her death, and at night went to bed seemingly quite well; she rang her bell at six in the morning for her maid, complained she was uncomfortable, and expired before seven without a groan or struggle. For such a peaceful close of a long life her truly Christian piety had fully prepared her. She had issue, three sons and four daughters; viz. Thomas the present Earl, who married Lady Mary Osborne, daughter of the Duke of Leeds; the late Henry Pelham, Colonel in the guards, who married Miss Cobbe, and died leaving two daughters; George, Bishop of Exeter, who married Mary, daughter of Sir R. Rycroft; Henrietta, married George Earl of Rothes, who died leaving three daughters; Frances, married George Lord Viscount Middleton, and died leaving one daughter; Lucy, married John Lord Sheffield, and died leaving no issue; Lady Amelia Pelham, now living and unmarried.

March 6. At his seat at Meaford, in the parish of Stone, co. Stafford, William Jervis, esq. elder brother of Earl St. Vincent, being son and heir of Swynton Jervis, also of Menford, barrister at law, who was fifth son of John Jervis, esq. formerly of Darlaston, in the same parish. Mr. William J. died without issue.

March 11. At Chelsea, aged 59, Mrs. Frances Reid. She was one of those whose name, although not destined to fill an elevated station, ought not to be allowed to pass away as though she had never been. She was distinguished by the most amiable qualities of mind, and filled the trying and laborious situation of a teacher in a female seminary with the greatest credit and usefulness. She so conciliated the esteem and affection of all who knew her, that the circumstance of her becoming independent a short period before her death, imparted the most cordial gratification to all who knew her. Her death is in like manner lamented with no ordinary regret; and the writer of this article, who knew her for a long series of years, feels a melancholy satisfaction in consecrating this tribute to her memory.

March 14. Aged about 60, Ed. Janson (late of Tottenham), a most worthy and benevolent man, of the respectable Society of Friends.

March 16. In Norfolk-street, Strand, in his way to the West of England for the benefit of health, in his 26th year, Mr. John Shipden, only son of James Shipden, esq. of Deal, banker. In the early part of his life he had been afflicted with that common and excruciating complaint, the Stone. When about nine years of age, he was put under the care of Mr. Perry, Surgeon, of London, the proprietor of Adams's Solvent, who attended him occasionally two or three years: the complaint after a considerable time gave way to the Solvent, and the Stone was gradually decomposed, and came away in the appearance of a thick mucus, with particles of a stony substance intermixed. At about 15 years of age the complaint ceased to exist, and he grew tall, and more healthy than he had been before; but an original want of stamina necessary to the vigour and firmness of a good constitution, was wanting. At the age of about twenty his health by slow degrees appeared to decline, and although every method was adopted that medical wisdom could suggest, he gradually for the last five years declined in health, till he became much emaciated, and when the writer of this saw him some months since, there was every appearance of a speedy dissolution, yet by great care and attention he was kept up (almost by art) until this day, at which time he was attacked by violent spasms in the stomach, which in a few hours terminated his existence, and left a childless father to lament the loss of a son, on whom he had bestowed the utmost parental care and affection, as the writer of this article has often been witness to. May Christian fortitude and firmness of mind enable him to bear this stroke of privation with a manly and becoming fortitude and resignation!

S. S.

March 23. In her 76th year, her Royal Highness Augusta, relict of Charles William Ferdinand Duke of Brunswick, and last surviving sister of our Sovereign. Her Royal Highness had been subject to an asthmatic complaint for some years, which was increased by the epidemic disorder now prevalent, with which she was attacked about two days before; but no alarm was excited till the morning previous to her death. Dr. Baillie left her about six o'clock in the evening, thinking her much better; but a little before nine she was seized with violent spasmodic attacks, and died at half past nine o'clock. Her Royal Highness was confined to her bed only two days.—She was born July 31, 1737, married Jan. 17, 1764, the late Duke of Brunswick Wolfenbuttle, by whom she had issue three sons and three daughters.

March 24. At Worcester, of a paralytic attack, Mrs. Sheridan, relict of the late Charles Francis Sheridan, esq. formerly Secretary at War in Ireland, and brother of the Rt. Hon. Richard Brinsley Sheridan.
