

fall, myself and the Officers of the regiment have to deplore the loss of a friend, who possessed the most amiable and the most excellent private virtues; and our Country is deprived of an officer of the first promise. Capt. H. fell at the head of his troop at a moment of the most brilliant success, which his gallant example had much contributed to obtain. I can scarcely expect that any thing I could say, on so melancholy an occasion, should have the effect to alleviate the pain you, Sir, and your family must feel; but I cannot omit to assure you that I saw Capt. Hansolt in his last moments, and that he expired free from pain. His death was occasioned by a carbine-shot, which entered his right breast, and he died in a few minutes after he was struck. At Bilbao, Spain, in his 28th year, Lieut.-col. Allan Campbell, major of the 74th Foot, and commandant of the 5d reg. of Portuguese Infantry. He had served four years in the Peninsula, and received the wound, which, after much suffering, caused his death, in the battle of the Pyrenees. The gallant manner in which he led his corps into action, upon that memorable day, was rewarded with a promotion that he has not lived to enjoy. The elder brother of Lieut.-col. Campbell was killed in India, when serving under the same great Commander: he fell also in the arms of victory, on the celebrated plains of Assaye. Lieut.-col. A. Campbell was the only surviving son of Sir Alex. Campbell, Commander-in-chief at the Isle of France. That distinguished officer, who was severely wounded at the battle of Talavera, in which he commanded the British centre, must feel deeply the loss of a son who was so endeared to him and to all his family by his virtues, and by the early fame acquired in the service of his Country.

Mr. W. Croot, of Bath; who quitted his lodgings in Chapel-court at an early hour, to take his usual morning's walk; when, in passing by the river in Kingsmead, he was seized with an apoplectic fit (strong symptoms of which he had many times experienced), and, falling into the river, was drowned, notwithstanding immediate assistance was rendered to extricate him. Mr. C. was in the 66th year of his age, and passed upwards of 40 years of his life at the Library on the Walks, as principal assistant to Mr. Leake, Mr. Bull, his son Mr. J. Bull, and the present proprietor, Mr. Upham; in which situation, during that long series of years, from the earliest hour of morning to advanced evening, he was always found at his post, full of such information as regarded the business, or the reigning topics of the day. He retired a few years since on a decent competency, the fruits of an industrious course, with the addition of 500*l*. left him by the late Mr. Bull.—To the Literati, and old frequenters of Bath, few men were better known than William Croot, to whom, and a large circle of friends, his melancholy end will be a subject of unfeigned regret.

In his 85th year, Mr. J. Nelson, third son of the late Capt. Geo. N. of Liverpool.

At Poundsdorf, near Leipsic, in Germany, in his 31st year, Capt. Richard Bogue, of the Royal Horse Artillery, commanding the British Rocket-brigade in the memorable battle of that day, by the successful issue of which Europe has approached to deliverance, and England has gained an additional wreath of glory.—After having contributed to this triumph by conspicuous gallantry, and services the most distinguished, this ornament to his Country, no less from professional accomplishments than from the private virtues of the heart, terminated his valuable life in his Country's cause, in the field of honour, leaving a disconsolate widow and two infant children to deplore the loss of the best of husbands and of fathers. The particulars of his fall, extracted from a private letter, cannot but be interesting to the Publick.—“Mr. James was with Capt. Bogue during the action, and at his side at the moment of his fall, in consequence of a rifle-ball which struck his face, and penetrated to the back part of his head; and his death was nearly instantaneous. Mr. James states the extraordinary and successful effects of the rockets, as well as the glory acquired by Captain Bogue from his gallantry and judicious use of them, as infinitely surpassing even what has hitherto appeared in the dispatches. The Rocket-brigade was attached to the Crown Prince's Body Guard, but in previous understanding that in days of action it might, at the direction and judgment of its commanding-officer, be independently employed. On the memoorable 18th, Capt. Bogue zealously seeing an opportunity of being useful against a large body of five French infantry battalions, occupying the village of Poundsdorf, gallantly solicited of General Winzingerode to go to the attack, where complete success crowned the operation, and Capt. Bogue lived to reap the honour of receiving the surrender of the whole five battalions himself, at the head of his own little force. It was in the attack of another post, similarly occupied by the French in great force, that our lamented and gallant Friend received the fatal shot, amidst the lamentations of the Army, and the acknowledgments that his services on that great day had been eminently conducive to its success.”—Capt. Bogue was brother-in-law to the lamented Capt. Hanson, who lately fell gloriously in Catalonia (see p. 499); Capt. B. having married the eldest daughter of John Hanson, esq. of the Rookery, Woodford, Essex.—He was the son of John Bogue, esq. M. D. of Fareham, Hants, who died in 1811 (see vol. LXXXI. p. 661.), by the eldest daughter of Richard Bergus, esq. of the same place, who was for near 50 years an Acting Magistrate for the County of Hants (see vol. LXXV. p. 389.) She died in 1806 (see vol. LXXVI. p. 886.)—Capt. Joseph Bradby Bogue, of His Majesty's ship Terpsichore, who died in 1807 (see vol. LXXVII. p. 376), was half brother of the late Capt. R. Bogue, being the son of Dr. Bogue, by his first wife.

At Bristol, Mr. Stuart, lapidary and jeweller; a lineal descendant of the family that gave birth to the Royal branch of the Stuarts; and son of the celebrated Major S. who fell among other brave men at the memorable Siege of Carthage, by the Spaniards springing a mine. Though satisfied to move in the sphere of a tradesman, to which the above melancholy catastrophe had reduced him, he supported a dignity, urbanity, and rectitude of conduct, through life, commensurate to his illustrious descent, and will be held in respectful remembrance by all those concerned with him. As an artist, he was as eminently distinguished for prompt and fertile invention as for elegant execution, in which he was equalled by few, excelled perhaps by none.

In Dublin, aged 70, Dowager Miss Grattan, sister to Rt. Hon. Henry G.

Oct. 24. Thos. Taylor, esq. of Pontefract, co. York.

Mrs. Williams, of the Old Park, widow of the late Mr. W. collector of the salt-taxes in Bristol.

Oct. 27. At Avoch Manse, co. Ross, in his 21st year, Mr. James Brodie Smith, only remaining son of the Rev. James Smith, Minister of that parish. His promising abilities, good sense, and prudence, matured by a liberal education; the virtuous and honourable principles which uniformly guided his conduct; the unaffected modesty, gentleness, and kindness of his disposition, and his truly engaging manners, procured to him uncommon esteem among his acquaintance of all ranks, but especially endeared him to a respectable circle of friends, both in the North and at Edinburgh; where, for some time past, he applied himself to the study of the Law and business. As a devout Christian, a dutiful son, a most affectionate brother, he has left indelible impressions on the hearts of his parents and family.

Nov. 1. Within the Rules of the King's Bench, aged 76, the Rev. Francis Saxe, some years ago rector of Cold Norton, Essex, and well known for the proceedings against him in the Ecclesiastical Court, before the Right Hon. Sir Wm. Scott, which terminated in his being deprived of his living by Dr. Porteus, then Bp. of London. See our number for May 1808, p. 455.

At Dereham, Norfolk, in the 70th year of her age, Lady Fenn, relict of Sir John Fenn, and sister of the late J. Freer, esq. M. P. of Roydon, in that county. It may be truly said of this lady, that her whole life has been spent in doing good; her little productions for the benefit of the rising generation, under the feigned names of Mrs. Lovechild and Mrs. Teachwell, will remain lasting monuments of her philanthropy, for her labours (and great must they have been), were all gratuitous, and consequently no idea of emolument ever entered her mind. Indeed they are so numerous, that we can only recollect those whose titles are subjoined; but it is hoped that some one of her numerous and respectable Relations will do that justice to her memory which is beyond the reach of the writer of the above. The following are part of her numerous publications: The Child's Grammar; The Mother's Grammar; Parsing Lessons to correspond with them; Short Sermons; The Sunday Miscellany; The Family Miscellany; The Infant's Friend, in two parts; a Spelling Book on a new plan; Cobwebs to catch Flies; Footsteps to Mrs. Trimmer's Sacred History; Grammatical Amusements; The Art of Teaching in Sport; Short History of Insects; The Friend of Mothers, &c. &c. &c.

In Suffolk-street, R. A. Harrison, esq. many years collector of the Customs at the Port of Hull.

Nov. 4. In Great Charlotte-street, Blackfriars, the daughter of James Ahler, esq. of the Customs.

Nov. 8. At his Palace at Peterborough, aged 85, Dr. Spencer Madan, Bishop of that Diocese; to whose honour he is recorded, conceded, that within the last six months, on a principle of conscientious duty, he had holden a general Visitation of his Diocese, notwithstanding the fullest persuasion of his own mind that the discharge of that duty would be fatal!—This benevolent Prelate was son of Colonel Martin Madan (M. P. for Wotton Bassett 1747, and afterwards for Bridport; who married Judith daughter of Spencer Cowper, esq. Justice of the Common Pleas, aunt of Cowper the Poet, and a lady herself eminent for her poetical talents.)—He was entered at Westminster 1742; elected to a Scholarship at Trinity College, Cambridge, 1746; proceeded B. A. 1749, among the Senior Wranglers of that year; M. A. 1753; and became a Fellow of the College; D. D. 1756; in which year he married Lady Charlotte Cornwallis, second daughter of Charles the first Earl, and sister of the late Marquis. By this lady (who died March 12, 1794) he had two sons and one daughter. Bishop Madan was some time vicar of Haxhay, and rector of West Halton, both in the county of Lincoln; chaplain to the King 1761; and in 1791, on the death of Dr. Christopher Wilson, was promoted to the See of Bristol, and thence translated to Peterborough on the death of Dr. John Hinchcliffe. This excellent Prelate was eminent for an amiable simplicity of life and manners, which rendered him universally beloved. It was his custom, during a very great portion of his long life, to rise so early, that he lighted his own fire from a rushlight (as the grate was previously prepared); and thus to pursue his favourite study of the Scriptures, long before daylight, in their original languages. His proficiency in the Hebrew language especially was eminent and rare; and it may perhaps be ascribed, in great measure, to the easy and laudable practice above-mentioned, well worthy of the notice and imitation of his clerical brethren in general.—Late in life, he formed a second matrimonial alliance, equally conducive to his own happiness and that of his family, with Miss Mary Vyse, sister of Gen. Vyse, and of the Rev. Archdeacon Vyse, rector of Lambeth, &c. &c. who survives him without issue.—Of the two sons by the former marriage, the eldest, Dr. Spencer Madan (who, like the Bishop, was educated at Westminster and at Trinity College) proceeded M. A. 1779; D. D. 1809; rector of Ibstock, co. Leicester, 1786; rector of St. Philip's, Birmingham, 1787; chaplain to his Majesty, 1788; canon residentiary of Lichfield, 1790; chancellor of Peterborough, 1794; prebendary of Peterborough, 1800; rector of Thorpe, co. Stafford, (on resigning St. Philip's and the canonry of Lichfield), 1810. This gentleman, whilst at Cambridge, obtained great credit both for talents and scholarship; and was adjudged the Seatonian Prize, in 1782, for "The Call of the Gentiles." He also translated Grotius "De Veritate;" and has published several single Sermons, particularly one printed in 1792 on the Consecration of his venerable Father. [In the "Biographical Peerage," this gentleman's publications are erroneously attributed to the Bishop.]—The second son, William-Charles Madan, is a Colonel in the Army.—The daughter, Charlotte, was married, in 1781, to Major-gen. George Ward.—An elder brother of the Bishop's, the Rev. Martin Madan, M. A. who had been at the Bar, afterwards made himself conspicuous by his celebrated Thelyphthora, arguing in favour of Polygamy. He published also a translation of Juvenal and some other works; and died at Epsom, May 2, 1790, æt. 64.—See the Pedigree of this Family in the "History of Leicestershire," vol. IV. p. 760.

Martin Bladen, Lord Hawke, and youngest daughter of the late Sir Edward Turner, bart. of Ambrosden Park, Oxon. Possessing a highly-gifted mind, and being eminently distinguished for the practice of every social virtue, she excited that affection whilst living, which could only be exceeded by the grief that is universally felt by her death.

Nov. 19. At his brother's, Salisbury-street, Straud, Henry Hutchinson, esq. of New-college, Oxford, L.L.B.

Nov. 20. In Hanover-square, suddenly, of an apoplectic fit, G. Johnstone, esq. M. P. for Heydon.

In Grafton-street, suddenly, the infant son of Viscount Deerhurst.

Nov. 21. In his 67th year, John White, esq. of Devonshire Place, St. Mary-le-bone, and of Two-Waters, Herts. The memory of this excellent man and worthy member of society is engraven in the hearts of a numerous family, and of an extensive acquaintance. Few men possessed greater native vigour of intellect, soundness of judgment, and integrity of principle. Few men in his station rendered more important and disinterested services to the community. The parish of Mary-le-bone especially, and the records of its vestry, contain many monuments of his assiduity in promoting the comfort of its inhabitants, the relief of its poorer members, and the increase of edifices for the services of Religion.

A Dissenter observes, that it was not "at 16 years of age that the Rev. Hugh Worthington was found capable of being assistant in the academy under Dr. Ashworth;" but when he had finished his academical studies at the age of 21. (See Mr. Carpenter's Memoirs.)—The Sermon of Mr. Crabb, which he edited, consisted not of "two volumes;" but of one. Mr. W. prefixed brief Memoirs of the Author.—In the favourable account given of Mr. W's. Prayers, it is said that the Prayers of a Dissenting Clergyman "are entirely extemporaneous, and originate purely in himself." This is not generally the case: though Mr. W's Prayers were doubtless his own, and were not properly forms, but free, and some petitions quite extempore; he accustomed himself to premeditation, as it is known many of his brethren do.
