Historical Chronicle.

From JANUARY to JUNE, 1814.

VOLUME LXXXIV.

(BEING THE SEVENTH OF A NEW SERIES.)

PART THE FIRST.

PRODESSE ET DELECTARE.

E PLURIBUS UNUM.

By SYLVANUS URBAN, Gent.

LONDON: Printed by NICHOLS, SON, and BENTLEY, at Cicero's Head, Red Lion Passage, Fleet Street ; where LETTERS are particularly requested to be sent, POST-PAID.

And sold by J. HARRIS (Successor to Mrs. NEWBERY), at the Corner of St. Paul's Church Yard, Ludgate Street ; and by PERTHES and BESSER, Hamburgh. 1814.

OH, for a son of bright-eyed glory,
 That sweeping o'er the chorded shell
 Should in sublimest numbers tell
 The patriot hero's deathless story.
 Oh, for a soul, that loved to ride
 The battle's most tempestuous tide,
 And thought the tumult of the fight
 Most sweet to ear, and beautiful to sight.
 If here thy glorious race began,
 And Oxford fashion'd thee so well,
 Up to the perfect man;
 Spirit of air, obey the spell.
 Oh, from the realms of day
 Waft hither some immortal lay.
 On thee thy Holy Mother calls,
 Bid every note of rapture swell
 To those that grace her honour'd walls.
 For these are they, who, leagued in holy tie,
 Self dedicate to Liberty,
 Her banner bright unfurl'd:
 Hope could not lead astray,
 Fear might not bar their way;
 They sav'd a sinking world.
 What though with giant force
 Elate of heart, and big with borrow'd fame,
 The dark Adventurer came;
 Uncheck'd they held their onward course.
 What though o'er all the red and restless sky
 The wasting flames roll'd horribly,
 The holy city fell,
 To them in that portentous hour
 Came thoughts of soul-sustaining power;
 Firm faith, and courage high,
 And agonizing memory;
 Dread voices from the silent earth
 Told of the mighty and unspotted dead:
 The race that shall be in the after time
 Rose up in shew sublime,
 And claim'd a freeman's birth.
 So that immortal city blaz'd on high
 An altar pile to Liberty,
 And from her throes
 The Spirit of the North sublimer rose
 To vengeance and to victory.

Yes, and it pass'd that night of sorrow,
 Dark mother of a glorious morrow:
 The sun, that to the waves
 Flew from a world of slaves,
 Uprose in holy jubilee;
 For every soul in every land was free.
 Yet mourn for Him, who o'er the tide of war
 Beam'd brightly as a comet star;
 And when that day was done,
 His toils were scarce begun:
 The wounded warrior's painful bed
 With holy love he visited:
 And his mild spirit groan'd to see
 That universal agony—
 What boots to tell, how o'er his grave
 She wept, that would have died to save?
 Little they know the heart, who deem
 Her sorrow but an infant's dream
 Of transient love begotten;
 A passing gale, that as it blows
 Just shakes the ripe drop from the rose
 That dies, and is forgotten.
 Oh woman, nurse of hopes, and fears,
 All lovely in thy spring of years,
 Thy soul in blameless mirth possessing—
 More lovely in affliction's tears—
 Most lovely still those tears suppressing!
 Changed be the note, and once again
 Strike, harp, a loud triumphant strain;
 Fill high the cup of praise
 To Him, who, in that desperate night,
 Still waved on high the beacon light;
 The Brunswick, resolute to save,
 Who stemm'd that all-devouring wave:
 Who, when no earthly hope was given,
 Found strength and confidence in heaven;
 And upward gazing on bright honour's
 sun,
 Finish'd the holy war his glorious Sire begun.

JOHN TAYLOR COLERIDGE,
Fellow of Exeter College.

INDEX INDICATORIUS.

We feel greatly indebted to a variety of kind Correspondents who have furnished us with particular details of the festivities, the benevolence, and the illuminations, in almost every Town and Village in the Kingdom. We cordially join them in their rejoicings; and can only wish that our limits would permit us to particularize their loyalty and generosity.

INQUIROR will be obliged by any information concerning the property, personal and real, left by Lieut.-gen. Frampton, who died at Butley Abbey, Suffolk, Sept. 23, 1749; and also of his family.

P. 315. In the elegant Inscription on Sir John Moore, l. 15, ET before GALLIS should be erased.

We are obliged to L. D. for his remarks. He would find, if he favoured us with his own Lucubrations, that neither the vanity of A. or of B. or the garrulous loquacity of C. or of D. would supersede his communications.—In some of his observations we agree with him; to others we dissect. Births and Marriages (unless well authenticated) are purposely curtailed. The Obituary is of infinitely more consequence; in which our original arrangement is still preserved, except where we cannot ascertain the exact days on which the parties died: in such cases, classing them in Counties, we conceive, assists the Reader. There are more appropriate channels for "a regular History of the Drama."

PREFACE

TO THE

FIRST PART OF THE EIGHTY-FOURTH VOLUME.

WE candidly acknowledge ourselves to be so dazzled with the glorious splendour, which at the present moment envelopes the atmosphere of Britain, that it is not without difficulty we obtain the self-command, temperately to express our emotions of rapture and of gratitude—yet, through this blaze of light and glory, we discern the finger of unerring Wisdom and Goodness, pointing to the destruction of the most cruel and unrelenting Tyranny which ever disorganized and destroyed the human species.—We contemplate also the mantle of Peace, spreading its graceful and lovely folds once more over the Nations of Europe; we hear a voice, which Buonaparte cannot hear, pronouncing aloud, to a delighted world—“ Good-will towards man.”—Here let us pause for a short interval, to indulge an honest and not indecorous ebullition of self-complacency.—That we have in some degree anticipated this most auspicious catastrophe; that we have, in no very ambiguous terms, in part ventured to foretel the restoration of Man’s best Rights, and a Tyrant’s downfall; to say the least, that we have uniformly, consistently, and pertinaciously, held forth to our Countrymen, the language of consolation and encouragement; that we have never shrunk from our duty, or for a moment bowed our necks to the modern Baal; we confidently appeal to the last Twenty Years of our Literary Labours:—Our Periodical Addresses to our Readers, in that long and momentous period, will be found full, we trust, of British ardour, marked with a proud disdain of the Tyrant and his Myrmidons, and replete with pious confidence in that unchangeable goodness, which, in its own good time, brings good out of evil.—But enough of the past; and the prospect before us is so animating, the landscape so enchanting, the gale so loaded with fragrance, and the meads so crowded with beautiful variety, that there is little inducement for retrospect, but every thing to hope from the future.

We cannot, however, press forward to our more immediate province of descanting a little on subjects of Science and the Arts, without pausing to contemplate, with a due mixture of admiration and pious gratitude, two great and proud circumstances, which peculiarly designate—and render for ever memorable the present epoch:—At the moment of our writing this Address, the happy shores of Britain have received with the acclamations of unaffected welcome the illustrious Sovereigns of Russia and Prussia, with a long and noble train of Princes,

Princes, Warriors, and Statesmen, from every Nation of Europe, not merely with the common rites of hospitality, but with embraces of the most cordial love, amity, and peace; their brows crowned with laurels glorious as our own, their language and demeanour combining to conciliate and to cement the most enduring friendship; having, as it should seem, but one heart, one wish, one object, in common with ourselves—gracious and kind, and affable to all—

Dum hæc loquimur,
Concurrunt læti obviam cupidinarii omnes,
Cetarii, lanii, cœqui, fartores, piscatores, aucupes.—

May the return of these illustrious Sovereigns to their own dominions be as auspicious and happy, as their friendly visit has been exhilarating and delightful to the Realms of England! May the trumpet of war, and the clang of arms, no more be heard among their subjects; but may the peaceful lute alone cheer and animate their cultivation of the arts of humanity!

The other circumstance, which dilates every British heart with transport, is the safe and felicitous return of our great and beloved Hero;

En hujus nati auspiciis nostra inclyta Roma,
Imperium terris, animos æquabit Olympo.

He is arrived, to receive a Nation's Praise, a Nation's Gratitude—and long may he enjoy them! It is not our province to descant on his transcendent talents; nor would it become us to specify his claims to the almost innumerable laurel-wreaths which surround his person and adorn his paths.—But it is peculiarly consistent in us, to give him the praise of being the harbinger of that tranquil and serene light, which promises in future security and encouragement to those pursuits, employments, and studies, to which for so long a series of years we have consecrated our time, our talents, our hopes, and our most enthusiastic ardour. It is the contemplation of this pleasing image, that enables us to throw aside, we trust for ever, the weight and the gloom which, though never rising to despondency, made us sympathize with the sufferings of our own and of all the Nations of Europe. The clouds are happily, and, as far as human sagacity can determine, effectually dispersed. We return with renewed ardour to our Scientific and Literary occupations, which indeed have always been in progress, though sometimes, perhaps, a little retarded by causes which have more or less given pain to every honest heart.—It now remains to listen to the Muse of Victory; to improve, adorn, and multiply the Arts of Peace; to extend the illuminations of Science in every direction:

Hæ nobis erunt artes.

We conclude, therefore, with first felicitating our Readers on the glorious termination of the sanguinary scenes of War; and with the repetition of our assurances, that every exertion of Genius, every improvement of Science, every contribution of Learning, will, as heretofore, receive our countenance, our encouragement, and our warmest gratitude.

ERRATA.

.. For the greater Part of the following Corrections we are indebted (as we have frequently been for many valuable Communications) to
A FRIEND TO ACCURACY.

VOLUME LXXXIII. PART I.
P. 500, a. l. 53. read Boddington.
665, b. l. 23. &c. read Addelestrop.

VOL. LXXXIII. PART II.
415, a. last line but six, read Marquis Townshend.

416, b. last line but five, at the conclusion of the preceding communication, the signature A FRIEND TO ACCURACY is by mistake omitted.

427, b. Your compositor has unintentionally made me appear to have asserted two untruths, in my communication, p. 427. In the first place, by incorrect pointing, it would seem as if I meant to say, the New Road extended nearly south-west and north-east when first made, but by inference it went in another direction at present. The paragraph should be pointed thus—“The New Road, extending nearly south-west and north-east, when first made intersected extensive level fields from Tottenham Court Road to Battle Bridge; about midway, and on the south side of the road, stood the Bowling-green House,” &c.

In enumerating the persons who have contributed to enlarge Somers Town, I presume your readers will acquit me of including Haymakers; and I assure them I wrote Staymakers.

J. P. MALCOLM.

499, a. l. 20. read Haviland.

502, b. last line but 4. read Graves.

531, a. l. 2. parenthesis after ‘Nov. the 13th, 1659,’ the addition ‘or 1660’ is needless, as the contents of the letter evince its being written prior to the Restoration of King Charles II. 533, a. l. 8. read Walter Sneyd, esq.

567, a. l. 22. read vol. LXXVII. p. 1119.

Ibid. after the words ‘Literary Intelligence,’ the word ‘Oxford’ is omitted.

582, b. Permit a St. Alban’s man to put in his plea for the honour of the Abbey Church, though not a Bishop’s See, to stand next after Winchester, it being set down as 539 feet long. J. B.

651, b. l. 4. for having, read have in.

666, b. l. 14 from the bottom, read Harvey.

700, b. l. 26. read Finchinfield.

VOLUME LXXXIV. PART I.

109, a. l. 9. read Grey.

199, a. l. 37 & 32. read Brisley.

Ibid. l. 41. read Allnutt.

202, b. l. 10 from the bottom, read Keighley.

204, b. l. 10. read Scratby.

231, a. l. 8. delete who.

360, b. l. 23. read affect.

409, b. l. 9, for 18 Oct. 1752; read 13 Sept. 1759; but the narration is incorrect, as General Wolfe was killed in the battle five days prior to the surrender of Quebec.

417, a. l. 25. read 1764.

452, b. l. 3 from the bottom of the text, before Bilson insert Henry.

463, a. l. 25 from the bottom, read Plattow.

513, b. l. 28. read Flixton.

518, a. l. 27. read Royds.

523, b. l. 4. for 1775. read 1755. (Earl of Roseberry succeeded his father.)
