In the living room, an interesting piece to look for is the marquetry style coffee table. Trimmed in brass, the antique table comes from England and is intricately inlaid.

The formal dining room, centred by a crystal chandelier, features a new mahogany table with several older pieces, including a buffet and cabinet, from the '20s.

The family room is a warm and welcoming place complete with a fireplace on one wall. Under the centre carpet is a parquet dance floor, offering an ideal spot for entertaining.

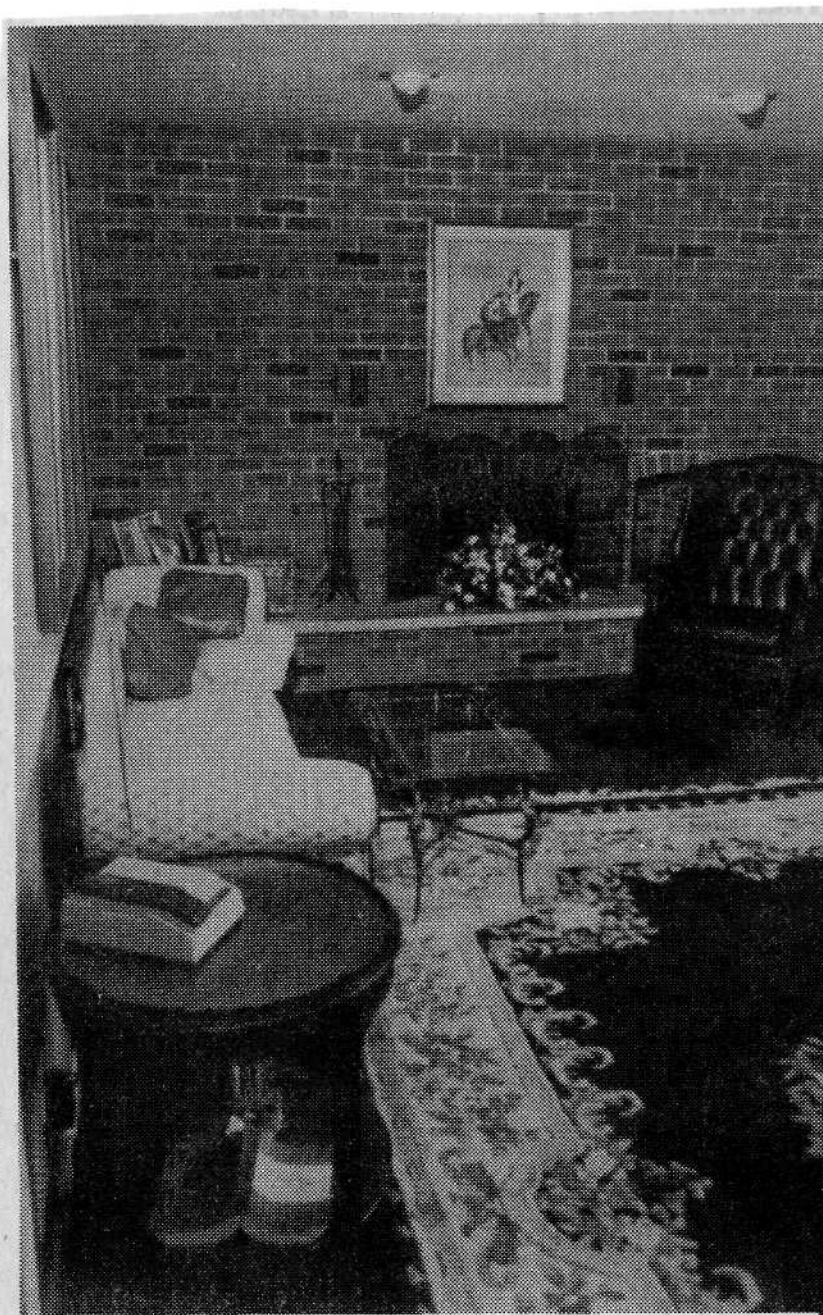

An interesting piece to note in the family room is the large, Dutch armoire on one wall. It was built around 1750.

The kitchen is modern and spacious and the illuminated ceiling and large window facing the south gives the room plenty of light.

Off the kitchen is the guest wing, offering its own full bathroom, a guest bedroom (which the family is now using as a playroom), and laundry facilities.

Upstairs, the bedroom of the couple's four-year-old son Brent is a typical boy's room with bunk beds and bright truck-covered wallpaper.

The master bedroom also contains several interesting pieces of furniture, including a four-poster bed and a Scottish wardrobe from 1850. The bathroom off
