MOIRA RIVER CONSERVATION AUTHORITY

O'Hara Saw Mill was originally built in 1846, and was operated by the family until 1909. It has the straight saw blade driven up and down by water power. The Mill, and surrounding 36 acres, was purchased in 1954 by the Moira River Conservation Authority and is now known as the O'Hara Mill Conservation Area. It is located some 3 miles northwest of Madoc and is easily accessible from Highways No. 7 and No. 62.

The Mill was completely reconstructed by the Authority and now cuts lumber, under water power, just as it did for the O'Hara's. Besides this unique historic attraction, the O'Hara Mill Area offers Picnic Tables, Stone Fire Places, a Nature Trail, and various conservation demonstrations.

The Moira River Conservation Authority is a corporate body formed under the Conservation Authority's Act, with representatives from the urban and rural municipalities in the 1,056 square mile water shed of the Moira River. Its successful operation depends on the interest and co-operation of all the citizens and users of the water shed. Half its annual budget is raised by contributions from the participating municipalities in proportion to their systems, the remainder coming from the Province of Ontario.

The Authority has undertaken an extensive reforestation program and to date has purchased over 8,000 acres for this purpose. It is presently developing three other Conservation Areas, one of which, the 500 acre Col. Roscoe Vanderwater Conservation Area, will be opened in 1960.

Further details of its activities can be secured from the office in the Municipal Building, Cannifton, Ontario.

BELLEVILLE

"The Heart of Distribution"
POPULATION - 28,500

HISTORY

Samuel de Champlain, the great French explorer, discovered, in 1615, an Indian village on the now known Bay of Quinte, by the name of "Asaukhknosk", meaning "The place where the rushes end". Little did Champlain realize that this little Indian village would someday become a rapidly expanding City known as Belleville, and the Heart of Distribution. The site of this Indian village was settled by the United Empire Loyalists in 1789, when the records indicate that fifty families arrived, forming the first U.E.L. settlement at Belleville and its adjoining territory. Belleville's first industry was started in 1790, by Captain John Walden Meyers, on the Moira River, which was a dam and lumber mill.

In 1834 Belleville was incorporated as a police village, and in 1850 was incorporated as a town. On March 2nd, 1877, a statute was passed incorporating Belleville as a City, to take effect December 31st, 1877.
