

New plant will be across from Sears warehouse

Continued from page 1.

Premier Dalton McGuinty stressed the importance of the investment of Kellogg's in this community and the province. He made specific reference to the Biofood Technician/Technology course available at Loyalist College saying it is a "match made in heaven."

"Our highly skilled and educated workforce continues to attract jobs and investment from world-class companies like Kellogg, which helps create opportunity for all Ontario families," said McGuinty.

Belleville Mayor Mary-Anne Sills also made reference to Loyalist College as "a huge asset and selling feature to Kellogg's."

Several other dignitaries joined in the celebration including Leona Dombrowsky, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs and Sandra Pupatello, Ontario Minister of Economic Development and Trade. Prince Edward-Hastings MPP [unclear] and [unclear] and [unclear] also present at the ceremony.

The new Kellogg facility, located at College Street East, across the street from the Sears warehouse, will initially employ about 100 people and is scheduled to be fully operational in the fall of 2007.