Mothers of young children comprised a large number of the striking employees of TRW, hit by a strike for the past two months by Canadian Auto Workers union Local 1839. Here, two of them share a happy moment shortly after a majority of their co-workers voted to end the strike and accept a 50-cent-an-hour wage hike at the College Street East plant that manufactures seatbelt assemblies for BMW and Volkswagen cars. From left:

Sharon Edwards holds son Cody, three months, and Jesse Edwards, 3, standing; Mary Boyce is with seven-month-old Kelly, at right. Both mothers said Christmas will be a little brighter this year.
