

Charlton, Deborah

Francis Charlton and her son, Stephen, read through the yearbook of their daughter's high school, Moira Secondary School, and reflect on their decision to allow physicians to use four organs taken from Debbie following her death last month in an accident in the city. The 19-year-old St. Lawrence College, Kingston, fashion-design student was struck by a car and died later in the week of head injuries. Her body was used to remove the heart, liver, kidneys, eyes and bones for transplant. The heart, liver and kidneys were used immediately and eyes and bones have been preserved for later use. The family said this week they hoped their daughter's untimely death will help others to lead normal lives.

Intelligencer
June 6, 1986