

FitzGibbon, Trish cont'd.

Intell March 10/07 p.C2

Trish FitzGibbon

of humour.

Her first class was Grade One at Marmora Street School in Trenton and it also marked her debut in special education field as a go-to teacher for colleagues.

"I was a special education resource teacher, then they closed the school and I (went) over to Queen Elizabeth," she said. The two Trenton schools are almost adjacent to each other.

Then it was on to various schools in Belleville and Tweed, eventually becoming a principal for student success — a rather unwieldy title but it does underscore what the job is all about — at the board office.

When she is not working, FitzGibbon likes to link up with the great outdoors. "Golf, golf, did I mention I like golf?"

→
cont'd.