JACK BRADFORD

Bradford new vp for Ontario's ^{Intell} credit service ^{May 22/ 1986}

Belleville resident Jack Bradford was elected vice-president of the Ontario Association of Credit Counselling Services.

Bradford has also served on the Quinte Region Credit Counselling Service board for the past four years, where he is currently vice-president.

The former Belleville alderman has many years of financial experience, including 22 years as a staff member for Associates Capital Corporation. At the time of his retirement several years ago, Bradford was senior vice-president of the company.

"I saw credit counselling grow up in Ontario, and I've seen it work," says Bradford.

The objectives of the provincial association, which formed in 1970, include the sharing of information between member credit counselling agencies. The association also assists with training programs for credit counselling staff, co-ordinates public education programs, and strives to develop and maintain good relationships with governments, co-operative agencies and associations that support credit counselling.

Bradford says his new position will likely "focus more attention on the work of Quinte credit counselling and the values of the service."

The provincial board includes regional vice-presidents, and in his two-year position, Bradford will act as vice-president "at large"—co-ordinating the work of the regional vice-presidents.
