

month. What a change!"

Mr. McMillan said he found the town a good deal smaller and quieter in the old days.

The disappearance of the steam locomotive from the railways was saddening, he said. "Many young kids are growing up now who will never see one," he said.

Mr. McMillan started with the CNR - then the Grand Trunk - back in 1916. He served in Stoney Creek, Canfield and Longwood before coming to Burlington as railway telegrapher. He moved to Aldershot station five years ago.

Retiring, Mr. McMillan has only one plan so far. He plans to continue living in Burlington.
