Column for Farmers.

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

As the time of year has arrived when farmers are procuring their stock of winter boots for themselves and their boys; and as dry, warm feet is a "consummation devoutly to be wished," a few hints on the subject by an "old one" may not be out of place.

HINTS WITH REGARD TO PACKING AND CURING PORK.

As the season for packing pork is now commencing, and many parties who may be tempted by the low price of hogs to pack, may not be able to secure the services of a competent and experienced party, we will endeavor to give a few plain practical hints to enable them to put up their pork in such a manner as to secure the best returns and the least possible loss in weight.

Curing.—Having observed the precaution of leaving the carcass hanging until the animal heat becomes extinct, first separate the head close behind the ears, and chop off the snout and under jaw above the tusks, pare off the ears, and cleave the head through the centre, remove the brains, and, if large, divide the halves at the jaw—next separate the neck close to the joint of the shoulder, which, cut in two, proceed by separating the shoulders, cutting through the body, in breadth about six or seven inches, divide in the centre, and cut each into pieces conformable to standard weight, cutting off the legs close above the knee joints. Next in order: separate the hams from the body at the hip bone, and in shaping the ham cut close to the croch bone, leaving a tail piece of five or six pounds, and when it is designed to pack the hams they should be cut into two or more pieces, according to weight, and the legs removed close above the gambol joint. Lastly, turn the trunk open side up, and cleave through the centre of the back, then divide in pieces of about six inches, or taking in about three ribs. When the pieces are very thick they should be chopped across the middle. All pieces should weigh from four to eight pounds.

Barrels.—Should be made of good and well seasoned white oak or white ash, staves 28 1/2 in. in length, and head 18 in. in diameter. Two-thirds of the barrel should be covered with good hoops, and a hole bored with an inch bit or auger in the bilge for the reception of pickle. The heads should never be bored. Barrels should be well made else they will lose the pickle, and the pork become rusty or otherwise damaged, while the regulations of inspection require defective barrels to be condemned.

Packing.—Use the best Liverpool salt, as it answers well for curing, and is most convenient for transmission to the country. Spread a layer of salt over the bottom of the barrel, and place the pieces side by side, edgeways, as close as possible, supplying a copious layer of salt between each layer of pork until the barrel is filled, using the best pieces for the top. Fill the barrel with pickle as strong as it can be made, and when carefully bunged, it should remain on the bilge, with bung upwards.

The grades established by law are Mess, Prime Mess, Prime, and Cargo. Mess.—Is made from side pieces of good fat hogs weighing two hundred and fifty pounds and upwards to the carcass. Prime Mess.—Is made from hogs of 225 lbs. One carcass of that weight, with lard and trimmings off, makes a barrel.

Prime.—Is made from hogs of 200 lbs. or thereabouts, and consists of one and a half hog to the barrel. Cargo.—Is a grade but little used, and scarcely worth the attention of packers. It is important to know that Pork fed on the better qualities of grain, such as corn, peas and oats, when packed at the usual season and pickled with the strongest pickle, will usually increase five to six per cent in weight; while that fed on soft grain and roots will gain little if anything, and distillery led will even decrease under the action of salt. All qualities, however good, will decrease in weight during the summer heat, and pork will always run short of the original weight if destitute of pickle.

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

The farmer who understands and attends to his business, will still find enough to keep him engaged, though his plowing and sowing are over for this fall. And first I would recommend that if he has not already a house in which to securely keep the tools and farming implements he has been using during the summer, to not fail having one built before winter sets in, for rest assured it will pay the cost in a year or two. If your waggons, carts and other vehicles of burden or pleasure, plows, harrows, etc., require mending, have it done now thoroughly. Attention to small matters begets a habit of being attentive in all things. Do any of your old fences need repairing, or do you contemplate building any new ones in the spring, if so, the winter is the best time to cut down and hew out posts and rails. Before putting in the posts clear the end that is to be put in the ground sufficiently far to let a portion be above the ground. Take all the bark off both posts and rails, and thereby remove a harboring place for worms. Always keep a year's stock of firewood cut ahead so that it will be dry when wanted for use. Be careful of your cattle. Remember that if they are in good condition on the first of December, they are already half wintered. Having attended to everything proper to be done on the farm in the way of business and labor, prepare for the enjoyments of winter. Life without some relief from the dull monotony of daily life would indeed be wearisome. Variety, in the language of minstrelsy, carries its charms to the heart.

PREPARE FOR WINTER.

Farmers have more on their hands at this season than other country people. They have now secured their principal harvests and secured them in barns, to be dealt out as fast as they are wanted. Corn is either put up in cribs where it may have air enough to secure it from moulding—or it lies in convenient heaps where it may be stripped of its husks in the long evenings when there is little else to be done. Fuel is an important article in winter in our climate. Dry wood and chips, so near to the kitchen that the domestics can find it without shovelling away the snow, or wading through it, are a luxury which all farmers do not enjoy. As soon as the harvesting is over let the wood-house be supplied with fuel that will burn without the aid of breath or bellows.

Chips and light kindlings cannot often be procured in abundance after the snows come, therefore take care and gather them before that occurrence. Our winters may be made pleasant when we have easy access to dry fuel. Apple tree limbs and brush are nearly as valuable as walnut for the kitchen and the parlor. "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost."—Mass. Ploughman.

INQUIRIES ANSWERED.

SHEEP TICKS.—In reply to the inquiry of "Cadmus," as to what will kill sheep ticks, I would recommend a mixture of Scotch snuff and lard, or whale oil, in the proportion of one ounce of snuff to one pound of lard or oil. Again in regard to building an ice house above ground, I would recommend him to build a frame house, at least 15 feet square, and 10 or 12 feet high, as a less one will not keep ice well; board it on both sides of the studding, and fill in between with tan or sawdust. In reply to his inquiry, "Whether orchard grass and Hungarian grass are same," I answer, No. There is a great difference between the two. The Hungarian is an annual grass, resembling foxtail grass somewhat in appearance, but with a much darker head, and it is eaten well by both horses and cattle. The orchard grass is very different. It is a very coarse grass, growing in tufts, and though tender when young is very tenacious of life when it once gets fairly started.

A TRUE REPLY.—"My dear doctor," said a lady, "I suffer a great deal with my eyes." "Be patient, madam," he replied, "you would probably suffer a great deal more without them."

PLAIN CUSTARD.—Boil a pint of milk, in which place two ounces of sugar, the thin peel of half a lemon; break in a basin four eggs, beat them well with a fork, then pour in the milk by degrees, not too hot; mix it well, pass it through a cullender or sieve, fill cups with it, and place it in a stew-pan, on the fire, which contains one inch of water; leave them for about twelve minutes, or till set, which is easily perceived.—Soyer.
