THE COMING SESSION.

Ar length Ministers have announceed that Parliament will meet for the dispatch of business on the 20th prox. At the time when members should be getting through with the business of the Session and preparing to return home, they are called to- in the right direction, gether-and this in direct opposition to oft-reiterated pledges that the House would meet in the latter part of January or beginning of February.

Meanwhile, there is a calm, as if in anticipation of the coming storm, The Ministerial organs have not deigned to enlighten the country on the measures to be introduced. We have seen it hinted, however, that a Bankruptey Bill is not likely to engage the attention of hon, gentlemen, as the time of the Attorney General has been completely occupied by the proposed Militia Bill. We hope this is not the case. It is of great importance to the country that a well considered measure for the relief of unfortunate traders should receive the sauction of the House this Session.
