We wish our readers in the several villages of the County of Victoria would lend us their aid in making our paper a medium of general intelligence. In almost every neighbourhood something of interest occurs worthy of a place in the local columns of a County paper, and we would feel much obliged to have such incidents forwarded to us by our readers. It cannot be expected that we can hear of everything worthy of publication. Will our friends assist us in this way, and help us to make the Pose the paper of the County?

We have now to consider what class of emigrants should go there, and at what period of the year. As the climate is severe and the labor most arduous, none need try the gold diggings but those who are prepared, with an indomitable will and iron constitution, to rough it and carry out their undertaking. It is also necessary, to insure success, that the emigrant be possessed of some means, say $1000, to keep him from starving in the mines before he gets any work, and to avail himself of any opportunity which may turn up. great change passed over Mawn. As the number of his days began to lessen, the terrible realization of his position be can to increase. He received, with thankful avidity, the minisistrations of Rev. Mr. Villeneuve, of the Seminary, and, we understand, manifested sincere contrition for the errors of his past life.

About nine o'clock the Reporters were admitted to a view of the man. His cell, strongly built, and the door of thick-ribbed iron, was the first of a series of five, all of them opening into a large apartment. In this latter place there was a temporary alter, used for the carrying out of the devotional ceremonies in which the convict had taken part. A number of nuns sat in the vicinity of this altar, deeply engaged in reading those religious exercises which the Roman Catholic Church appoints for such occasions. The prisoner's cell was

About half-past 9 the Deputy-Sheriff, M. H. Sanborn, Esq., attired in the robes and wearing the sword of office, appeared at the door of the apartment containing the condemned cell. At this time Mawn was on his knees, and a Nun at each side of him reciting the appropriate prayers, the convict following them in a clear and audible voice. The other sisters in the apartment and near to the altar were also deeply engaged in their devotions. When the hour of 10 arrived, Mawn was conducted to the Pinioning room, a small apartment a little to the right of the entrance to the fail door, and used for a surgery. On his way along the passage leading to this room the convict stopped for an instant to shake hauds with one of the turnkeys. We fancied that there was a change in his manner: as he was accompanied with a smile; but it was a sickly one, as if the shadows of the grave had already begun to steal over his countenance.

The prisoner was first in the procession to the Pinioning room, then came Rev. Mr. Vil next came the Sisters, some of whom were overcome almost to weeping.

The convict, priest and nuns knelt down the Pinioning room, and the prayers for the dead were then recited. While the services were proceeding one of the turnkeys advanced and fastened Mawn's arms behind his back with a leather strap, his wrists were also secured in the same manner, when the Executioner—a middle-sized man—advanced from an ante-room where he had been waiting, and ed, where practicable, to fill the vacancies oc-casioned by dismissals with other officers now Mawn submitted to the process without mumur or complaint of any kind. This sad office performed, the procession prepared to start for the scaffold. First came the Sheriff and Chas Schiller, Esq., Deputy-Clerk of the Crown. Next in order was the Rev. Mr. Villeneuve, after him marched the convict, pinioned, his head a little bent forward, the rope around his neck, and the hangman—a most repulsive figure, muffled in black from head to foot—following Mawn step for step, and having the end of the rope in his hand. Last of all came the assiduous and kind-hearted Sisters, some of hem in vain endeavoring to retain their tears.

The procession moved rapidly across the Jail yard, and Mawn ascended the steps of the scaffold so rapidly that Rev. Mr. Villeneuve gently cautioned him not to go so fast. A minute or so having passed, the convict, who were no cap, was stationed on the trappriest. A moment elapsed—the end of the rope was affixed to the hook in the beam above; Rev. Mr. Villeneuve then stepped forward and presented to Mawn's lips a crucifix. The priest then pronounced the words, "May God have mercy on your soul." The signal was then given, a heavy creaking smote upon the ear, then came the loud clash of the falling. trap-door, and, swift as an arrow from a bow, the convict descended, and swung round in one > CANADIAN CORRUPTION.—The corruption of ublic men in Canada, says the St. Catharines Journal, must have been carried to a fearful extent. A gentleman informed us the other day that he had not been elected to one of the Houses of Parliament over four weeks before he was offered £800 for his vote and influence in favor of a certain measure. Luckily he was in a position that enabled him to indignantly reject the offer; but suppose he had been one of those needy hangers-on to Providence, who occasionally got pitch-forked into Parliament, what would the consequences have been?

It would seem that there is, at the present time, among the pigs in the outskirts and subregions, the news from British Columbia is conflicting and uncertain.

The excuse of the Company for this rigorism is, that they have contracted for through freight from the Far West, for which they will require the exclusive use of their cars during the whole of the winter. The Courrier further states that this measure is adopted by the Company as a unishment of the Province, and in order to bring the Legislature to their own terms, by showing what power they have to inflict damage on the country.

No sooner, however, did Kennedy find himself loose, than he pulled out a pistol and levelled it at Ennes. The Post Office.—The inquiry instituted by the Postmaster General into the management of the Montreal Post Office, is drawing to a close. If all that is said he true, the in vestigation will show that the office has long been in a state of insubordination, arising from the political relations borne by certain of the clerks to members of the late Government. It will appear, we believe, that leave of absence will appear, we believe, that leave of absence has been granted in some cases for extended periods, not only without the sanction of the Postmaster, but without the knowledge of the responsible head of the department; and these exemptions from office duty have heen used sometimes for political purposes, at other times for personal pleasures. The staff of clerks, we are informed, will be reduced, and there will be also some dismissals. It is intended afterwards to extend the inquiry to the post-offices of the other cities of the Province, which seems generally to be conducted on a scale much more expensive than the exigenscale much more expensive than the exigencies of business require. This is said to be especially true of the Hamilton and London offices. The existing mail contracts will also be subjected to a rigorous examination, a has-ty glance having sufficed to establish the fact that a large proportion of them have been granted without compliance with the law requiring the publication of advertisements for In addition to changes consequent upon these inquiries, we learn that two Upper Canada functionaries are about to be dismiss-ed, whose offices entail an annual cost of nearly $4,000 cash, and neither of which is considered necessary.
